

17.05.18

gLAWcal
Comment #241

TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER AND DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

Based on

Elena Cima “The Role of Domestic Policies in Fostering Technology Transfer: Evidence from China”

A gLAWcal comment on Elena Cima "The Role of Domestic Policies in Fostering Technology Transfer: Evidence from China" in Paolo Davide Farah and Elena Cima (Eds.) China's Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law

rienced by China's wind power sector. Not only have they been successful in installing vast sums of wind turbine farm, but they are manufacturing nearly every part of final product for their own systems. This specialized knowledge, vertically integrated into one system, allows for a unique position for China to be able to transfer both the physical goods, as well as the knowled

This chapter provides the context for the arena of Chinese domestic policy concerned with the transfer of technology and practices that aim to improve developing nations. This goal was specified in the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and the Kyoto Protocol. Simply, there is a need for developed nations to give physical goods that can aid developing nations in the overall goal of meeting the objectives of the frameworks. China is lauded as an excellent example by the author. They are worth noting due to their domestic-level approach to igniting a vibrant technology transfer market originating from China to developing nations. The technology transfers originated from the growth expe-

Cite as: gLAWcal Comment #241 “Technology transfer and Developing Countries” (2018) based on Elena Cima “The Role of Domestic Policies in Fostering Technology Transfer: Evidence from China”, in Paolo Davide Farah & Elena Cima (Editors), China’s Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law, gLAWcal Book Series, Routledge Publishing (New-York/London), 2016

The gLAWcal comments are insight and short analytical pieces written by the gLAWcal team. The gLAWcal comments are based on, and inspired by, the books and chapters published within one of the gLAWcal book series published by Routledge Publishing (New York/London).

gLAWcal is an independent non-profit research organization (think tank) that aims at providing a new focus on issues related to economic law, globalization and development, namely the relationship between international economy and trade, with special attention to a number of non-trade-related values and concerns. Through research and policy analysis, gLAWcal sheds a new light on issues such as good governance, human rights, right to water, rights to food, social, economic and cultural rights, labour rights, access to knowledge, public health, social welfare, consumer interests and animal welfare, climate change, energy, environmental protection and sustainable development, product safety, food safety and security.

OUR MISSION

To collaborate with Government, Civil society and business community to balance the excess of globalization with Non Trade Concerns.

OUR GOALS

To influence policymakers, to raise awareness over Non Trade Concerns, to encourage stakeholder participation, and to disseminate gLAWcal’s publication results.

Email: research@glawcal.org.uk
Website: glawcal.org.uk
Facebook: gLAWcal - Global Law Initiatives for Sustainable Development
Twitter: @gLAWcal
LinkedIn: gLAWcal