29.05.18

gLAWcal #249 Comment #249

CHINESE NGOS ARE EMERGING AS A FORCE IN THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY

Based on

Zhixiong Huang "The Development of NGOs in China: A Case Study on Their Involvement with Climate Change"

A gLAWcal comment on Zhixiong Huang ""The Development of NGOs in China: A Case Study on Their Involvement with Climate Change" in Paolo Davide Farah and Elena Cima (Eds.) China's Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law international context are not given the same level of influence as compared to NGOs that were established many decades prior. The more interesting point that the author brought in the chapter is that domestically, Chinese NGOs still are a great architect for social and cultural change for the nation. It is to be expected that soon enough, these new Chinese NGOs will garner the same level of respect as their counterparts in other nations.

Non-governmental organizations have played a big role in the international emergence of climate change-combatting efforts from the beginning. They played a role in the adoption of the Kyoto Protocol and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). In China, the emergence of NGOs specific to the efforts in reigning in the effects of climate change began in the early 1990s. The Friends of Nature was this first organization aimed at public education efforts for the effects of climate change. Since then, many more organizations have emerged as the topic of climate change has elevated in the minds of the citizens and the priorities of the national government. However, as compared to NGOs in other nations, the Chinese counterparts are still relatively new and thus provide an opportunity for comparison between them. Often, the Chinese NGOs in the

Cite as: gLAWcal Comment #249 "Chinese NGOs are emerging as a force in the international community" (2018) based on Zhixiong Huang "The Development of NGOs in China: A Case Study on Their Involvement with Climate Change", in Paolo Davide Farah & Elena Cima (Editors), China's Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law, gLAWcal Book Series, Routledge Publishing (New-York/London), 2016

The gLAWcal comments are insight and short analytical pieces written by the gLAWcal team. The gLAWcal comments are based on, and inspired by, the books and chapters published within one of the gLAWcal book series published by Routledge Publishing (New York/London).

gLAWcal is an independent non-profit research organization (think tank) that aims at providing a new focus on issues related to economic law, globalization and development, namely the relationship between international economy and trade, with special attention to a number of non-trade-related values and concerns. Through research and policy analysis, gLAWcal sheds a new light on issues such as good governance, human rights, right to water, rights to food, social, economic and cultural rights, labour rights, access to knowledge, public health, social welfare, consumer interests and animal welfare, climate change, energy, environmental protection and sustainable development, product safety, food safety and security.

OUR MISSION

To collaborate with Government, Civil society and business community to balance the excess of globalization with Non Trade Concerns.

OUR GOALS

To influence policymakers, to raise awareness over Non Trade Concerns, to encourage stakeholder participation, and to disseminate gLAWcal's publication results.

Email: research@glawcal.org.uk

Website: glawcal.org.uk

Facebook: gLAWcal - Global Law Initiatives for Sustainable Development

Twitter: @gLAWcal LinkedIn: gLAWcal