11.05.18

gLAWcal #237 Comment #237

A CASE FOR NON-TRADE CONCERNS IN THE GREATER CONTEXT OF GLOBALIZA-TION

Based on

Paolo D. Farah "The Development of Global Justice and Sustainable Development Principles in the WTO Multilateral Trading System through the Lens of Non-Trade Concerns: An Appraisal on China's Progress" gLAWcal comment on Paolo Davide Farah "The Development of Global Justice and Sustainable Development Principles in the WTO Multilateral Trading System through the Lens of Non-Trade Concerns: An Appraisal on China's Progress" in Paolo Davide Farah and Elena Cima (Eds.) China's Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law

This chapter narrows specifically onto the Non-Trade Concerns, laying the framework for how this area of the law and negotiations can be used to stem the ills of globalization. Recognizing that there are human costs to the results of the benefits achieved by globalization, it is not to be ignored that there are real and continued costs associated with the production of goods across nations. The anxiety experienced by those that are left behind in the boom of profits achieved by a globalized manufacturing scheme has been captured in the political arena, allowing those who are able to capitalize on this economic anxiety to develop quick, and unusual coalitions to rise to power. However, this rise to power for the politician on the stand of the economically anxious, does not necessitate that they implement lasting programs to aid those feeling the ills of globalization on the individualized scale. The author is able to weave the ideas of Non-Trade Concerns (NTCs) into the broader national-level discussions of sustainable policies to reduce the economic anxiety experienced on the personal-level. Here, the ebb and flow demanded from more capitalist societies require that goods be bought and sold for the lowest price. However, those who lose jobs in the global pursuit for this fundamental aspect of capitalism must be pushed back against in incremental ways to avoid all out destruction of the WTO policies ensuring the possibility of free-trade agreements.

Cite as: gLAWcal Comment #237 " A case for Non-Trade Concerns in the greater context of globalization" (2018) based on Paolo Davide Farah "The Development of Global Justice and Sustainable Development Principles in the WTO Multilateral Trading System through the Lens of Non-Trade Concerns: An Appraisal on China's Progress", in Paolo Davide Farah & Elena Cima (Editors), China's Influence on Non-Trade Concerns in International Economic Law, gLAWcal Book Series, Routledge Publishing (New-York/London), 2016

The gLAWcal comments are insight and short analytical pieces written by the gLAWcal team. The gLAWcal comments are based on, and inspired by, the books and chapters published within one of the gLAWcal book series published by Routledge Publishing (New York/London).

gLAWcal is an independent non-profit research organization (think tank) that aims at providing a new focus on issues related to economic law, globalization and development, namely the relationship between international economy and trade, with special attention to a number of non-trade-related values and concerns. Through research and policy analysis, gLAWcal sheds a new light on issues such as good governance, human rights, right to water, rights to food, social, economic and cultural rights, labour rights, access to knowledge, public health, social welfare, consumer interests and animal welfare, climate change, energy, environmental protection and sustainable development, product safety, food safety and security.

OUR MISSION

To collaborate with Government, Civil society and business community to balance the excess of globalization with Non Trade Concerns.

OUR GOALS

To influence policymakers, to raise awareness over Non Trade Concerns, to encourage stakeholder participation, and to disseminate gLAWcal's publication results.

Email: research@glawcal.org.uk

Website: glawcal.org.uk

Facebook: gLAWcal - Global Law Initiatives for Sustainable Development

Twitter: @gLAWcal LinkedIn: gLAWcal