Discussion Questions:

1. Processing grief is absolutely essential and is the healthiest choice when you experience a loss. In fact, Pastor Rick taught that grief is God's tool to get you through the transitions of life. Do you have an unresolved loss that is keeping you stuck?
2. Grief is healed in community. People share each other's sorrows through loss. If you have experienced this kind of deep connection with others, please share your reflections with the group.
3. Unmourned losses are like a deep wound that has never been cleaned out, treated, and healed. Left unresolved, this wound can create chronic illness in your body. Does anyone want to share a testimony about this?
4. Fear is paralyzing, not grief itself. Moving through the grief process will actually help you get on the rest of your life. Start shrinking your fears by bringing them out into the open in the safety of your group.
5. You can only get through your pain once you acknowledge it, accept it, and feel it. One of the first steps to help yourself move forward is to list the losses you have yet grieved. What emotions bubble up when you think of making that list? Ask your group to support you as you plan to take this first step in uncovering your unmourned losses.

Putting it into Practice:

Start reading through the book of Psalms. Get a modern translation, and underline every verse that you identify with and every verse that encourages you. Then you'll have it as a go-to resource for yourself and to share with others when they need it.

Prayer Direction:

Pastor Rick taught us how to lament. This is simply the act of expressing our grief to God, but it's essential to moving forward through grief. As you close in prayer, thank God for providing this intimate worship experience that allows us to release painful memories and draw strength from our compassionate Creator.
