

Overview

This is a fun game that everyone in your group can play. There will be one person trying to figure out who in the audience is leading the people. Once that person discovers the leader, that leader then leaves the room and will be the next person guessing to find the new leader the group has chosen. Play as many rounds as you would like.

How to Play

1. Choose one Person to leave the room. Let's call that person the enemy. Make sure they can't hear or see the audience.
2. The audience chooses one person to be their leader.
3. You bring the enemy back into the room.
4. The leader can start to do anything they want while staying in their chair or space.
5. If the leader scratches their nose. Then all the crowd must scratch their nose until the leader stops. They must try to sit like the leader, move their face like the leader. Everything the leader does the crowd must copy as quick as they can. The key for the audience is watching the leader without all obviously looking at one person.
6. The enemy is trying to guess who in the room is the leader.
7. Once the enemy discovers the leader. The old leader leaves the room and a new round is started.

Pro Tip

1. Make sure your audience can see each other. You may need to move chairs around.
2. For an added element, you can set a timer and see how many different movements each leader can lead the audience in without getting caught before time runs out. You can reward a winner at the end of the game.
