COMENTARIO<sup>1</sup>

El Estudio VI "Secuencias" op.22a nació en 1991 gracias a un encargo de Antonio Serrano, virtuoso intérprete de la armónica, quien la estrenó en Bruselas en 1992. Escribir una obra de estas características supuso, naturalmente, un reto muy diferente al que implicaría cualquier instrumento más integrado en el "circuito sinfónico", pero bastó una demostración sonora de Antonio para captar el enorme potencial musical que encierra la armónica y convencerme de lo interesante del proyecto. El resultado es una obra en la que prescindí voluntariamente de cualquier acompañamiento, con el fin de resaltar al máximo los recursos del instrumento, y cuya estructura responde a un sencillo esquema formal (Introducción - A - B - A' - Coda). Integrada dentro de mi serie de estudios, la obra tiene una versión posterior para violín y marimba (premiada y estrenada por el Dúo Marimolín en Estados Unidos) y otra para acordeón (estrenada por Ángel Luis Castaño en Madrid). La obra está dedicada, naturalmente, a Antonio Serrano.

Commentary

As transcription of my former work Estudio VI “Secuencias” op.22a for solo harmonica (1992), I have tried in this new draft to “translate” a piece composed for a solo and basically sustained-playing instrument into a new work for a duo where the instruments employed have very different and contrasting qualities, not only from the point of view of timbre (register, attack, sustain, decay, overtone content and so on), but also in which concerns to history, tradition and knowledge of them. Nevertheless, it was not my purpose to emphasize the unlikeness, but, on the contrary, to handle both partners as a single instrument with varied timbral possibilities.

The work is structured in a clear ABA’ form, with a introduction in which some of the coming themes are already announced, and a coda with a “swing” version of the main theme of part A, including also a enlarged outline of final cadence.

OBSERVACIONES

- Los sonidos simultáneos de la marimba que llevan la indicación de tremolo deben ser tocados alternadamente, según los ejemplos adjuntos: en el caso de la octava empezando por la nota grave, y en el caso de los demás intervalos y de los acordes empezando por arriba. Cuando el acorde tenga tres sonidos se agruparán los dos agudos contra el grave.

- Los sonidos individuales con la indicación de tremolo se tocarán de la forma habitual.
- Las marimbas que no alcancen los sonidos graves pueden omitir la nota grave en el caso de octavas normales, o subir una octava en el caso de octavas en tremolo.
- Las notas entre paréntesis pueden omitirse en caso de dificultad.
- Indicaciones de Tempo:

COMMENTARIES

- Simultaneously sounding notes in the marimba with a tremolo sign must be played as alternate notes, as indicated in the following examples. In the case of the octave beginning with the low note, and for the rest of the intervals and chords beginning from the top note or interval. When playing three-note chords the two high notes will alternate with the low one.

- Individual notes with a tremolo sign will be played as usual.
- Marimbas not reaching low register may eliminate the low note in the normal octaves, or go up an octave in the tremolo octaves.
- Notes between parenthesis may not be played if it is too difficult.

Estudio VI "Secuencias" op.22c

Acordeón

Duración: ≈ 9 min.

Madrid, julio de 1996

Estreno: Ángel Luis Castaño

Teatro Pradillo (Madrid), 14 de abril de 1997

COMENTARIO

El Estudio VI "Secuencias" op.22c forma parte de una serie de obras para solistas o dúos instrumentales (piano a dos y cuatro manos, órgano, acordeón, armónica y guitarra). Su origen se remonta a 1992, por un encargo de Antonio Serrano para armónica sola (el op.22a), cuya transcripción para violín y marimba (el op.22b) obtuvo el 1º Premio del Marimolin 8th Composition Annual Contest en Princeton, New Jersey (USA) en 1995. La transcripción para acordeón de éste último data de 1996. Al igual que en el resto de los estudios, se explotan aquí los aspectos técnicos del instrumento, sus recursos y posibilidades, pero todo ello dentro del marco de una obra autónoma, cuya lógica interna y cuyo discurso sonoro trascienden el significado original del termino en su acepción histórica más extendida.

Enrique Igoa

La obra está dedicada a Ángel Luis Castaño, a quien también agradezco el excelente trabajo
de revisión de la misma.
