

The religious exemption process is different in each state and you'll have to track down the correct form by either going to your state website, or by typing in "vaccine religious exemption form" followed by the name of your state in DuckDuckGo (or any search engine, I just prefer DuckDuckGo). You may not find the form on the first page of search results either! I have a feeling this is by design.

Your employer or school may also have a religious exemption form specific to that particular institution. Don't be afraid to ask them for one!

To clarify, there is no uniform exemption form that works for all states. Each state that offers a vaccine exemption will either have the form available on their website (usually the health department), or your employer/school will have one that's specific to them. Again, it differs from state to state. It may be frustrating and difficult to locate the form you need, but if your state offers an exemption the correct form is definitely out there!

I would highly recommend reading the handbook prior to submitting a form to work or school. You can also click on the following link for more information:

Additionally, America's Frontline Doctors have some great resources as well. They can be found here: <https://americasfrontlinedoctors.org/>

Like I mention in my video, including a letter with your religious exemption form is recommended (but not required). The submission process will be different depending on your school/employer, and you'll have to be the one who decides when the "right time" is to submit it. With that said, I would recommend getting one filled out ASAP and having it on-hand. This will give you time to get your ducks in a row!

Please note the following: the religious exemption information originates from the Awaken New York website. I had nothing to do with the creation of the attached handbook! My role in this process is that of a messenger.

I would also recommend downloading the sample "declination letter". It states that "you as a human being reserve the right to your biological self, and you decline the offer of vaccination". It also states that "you decline any and all products offered by your employer that cannot be removed or retrieved from your body when you leave work for the day".

What these employers are doing is illegal. An employer can't mandate that you have a medical intervention. In short, you own your body, your employer does not, and anything your employer asks you to do is "work related" and must be limited to "while you're at work". Getting a vaccine is not limited to while you're at work. Feel free to copy and paste the sample letter and make edits that meet your needs.

Lastly, think of this as advice from a friend. Someone who cares about you as a fellow human being. I'm not an attorney and as much as I would love to, I cannot give any legal advice!

Please keep your spirits and courage up. We're going to win this thing as long as we have patience, determination, and self control. Our enemies want us at each other's throats and it's absolutely imperative we resist this urge with all our might.
