ABOUT THIS EVENT

The Standards and Codes Academy understands how important your safety is. As Code Officials, we are the eyes and ears of our communities. Unfortunately, sometimes you may be put in dangerous situations, and we want to ensure that we do our best to help you avoid them.

Our courses are geared towards awareness and making sure you understand that you may be inadvertently put in harm's way.

We have assembled speakers from various disciplines to assist you in recognizing potential dangers. We also want to ensure that they meet your budget. We hope you enjoy the courses, and we will continue to add additional value to your professional development. Your safety is a priority for SACA and we want to do our part to make sure you go home safe.

Thank you, from SACA

UNDERSTANDING AUTISM FOR THE CODE OFFICIAL

WITH GARY WEITZEN

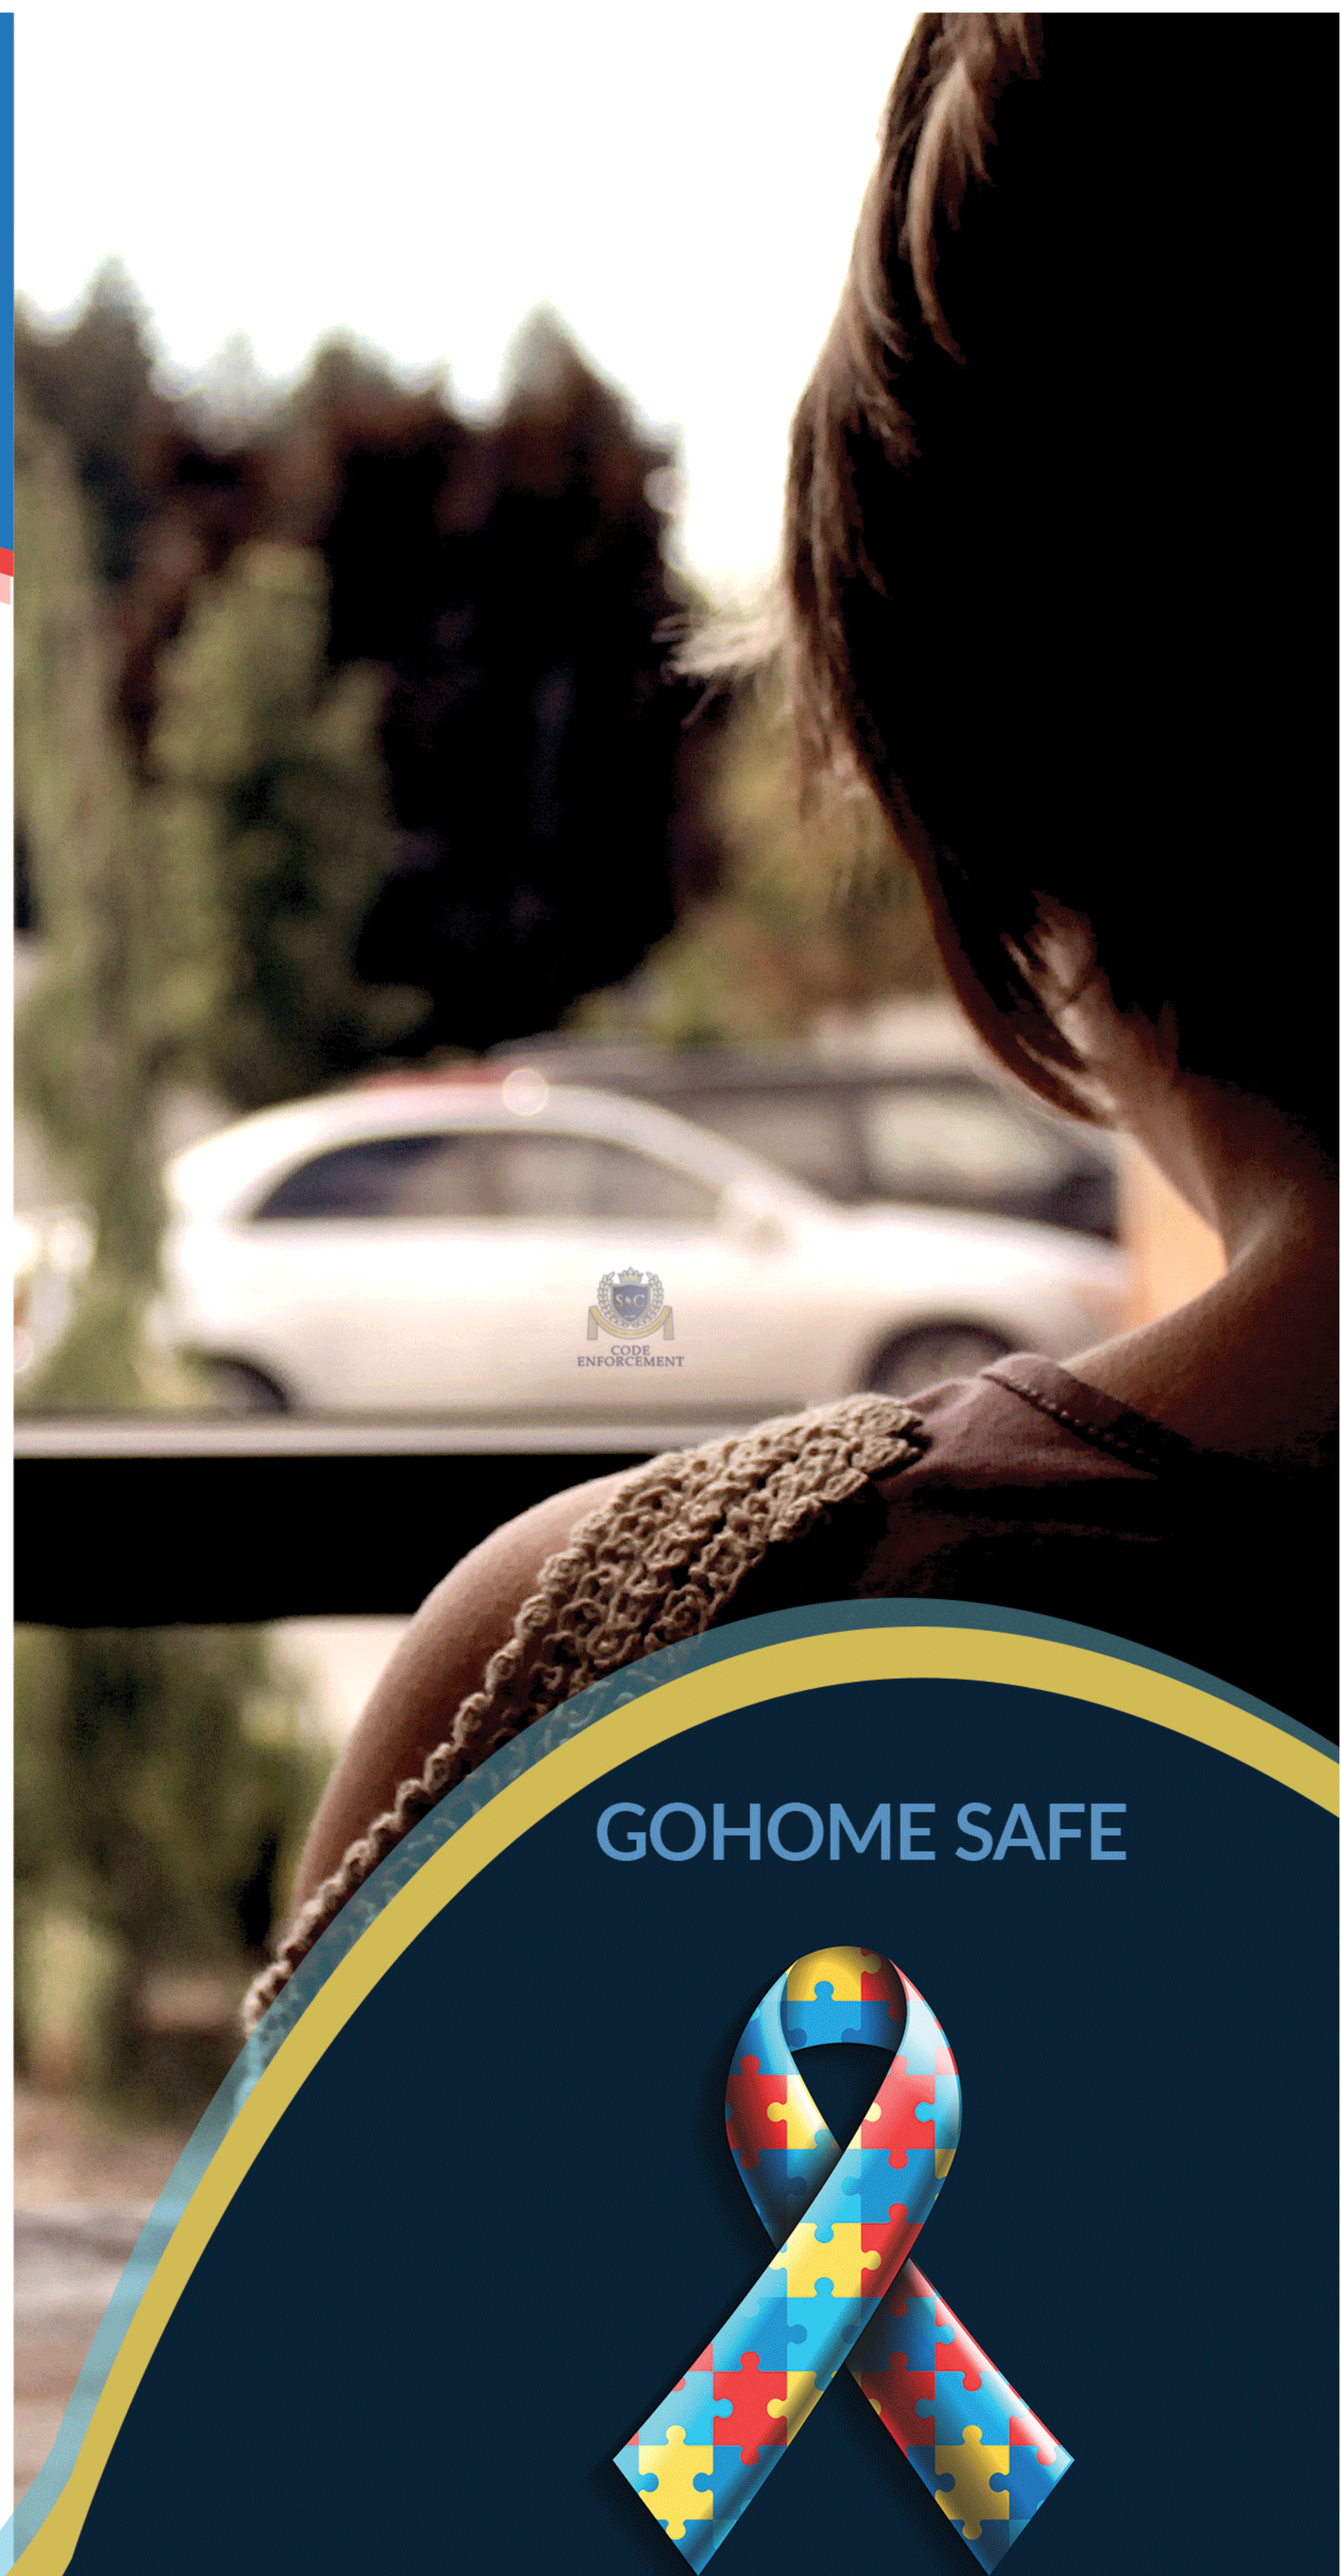

During an inspection, we may visit individuals with autism or their loved ones. We, as code officials, must approach with awareness and understanding. Many individuals on the autism spectrum do not understand the rules and boundaries of social behavior. As a result, many respond impulsively to their feelings without regard to specific social mores. Others react inappropriately as a result of sensory regulation problems.

These individuals can become overstimulated and may have what appears to be an unprovoked “meltdown.”

Because of these and other symptoms of Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), it is possible for individuals to find themselves in trouble with the law without any awareness of having done something wrong or without any understanding of what they did that got them into trouble. This course is designed to give the attendee a better understanding of this mental disability.

GO HOME SAFE: ANIMAL SAFETY AWARENESS

WITH KEVIN HEARST

Because pets and various other animals have become so much a part of U.S. society, regulatory enforcement officers routinely deal with them in the line of duty, and not just when responding to complaints. As code officials, it is vital to recognize and detect animal behavior before an attack can happen.

This course will also discuss what a code official should do if an animal attack occurs.
