Commemorate Black History Month

This year, Black History Month also marks the conclusion of the “Year of Frederick Douglass,” an American hero and Maryland icon. Home to civil rights pioneers and true freedom fighters such as Douglass, Harriet Tubman, Justice Thurgood Marshall, and more-- there is so much to see, do, and learn in Maryland all month long. Look for events at the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Visitor Center on the Eastern Shore, the Banneker-Douglass Museum in Annapolis, and Baltimore’s Reginald F. Lewis Museum, Great Blacks in Wax Museum, and the Frederick Douglass-Isaac Myers Maritime Park to name just a few, with more events across the state. Find out where and when on our Black History Month page.

Celebrate Valentine’s Day with a Maryland Escape

The temperature may be dropping, but we’ve got the perfect Valentine’s Day suggestions to heat things up. Revisit that restaurant where the two of you fell in love, try a great holiday getaway package — at a hotel at the beach, in the mountains, in downtown areas, or right around the corner — or get out and catch a show. There’s so much to love in Maryland this February.

Raise a Glass to Your Sweetie During FeBREWary!

FeBREWary, Maryland’s month-long celebration of our thriving craft brewing culture, is the perfect time to toast that special someone. With special beer releases and craft brewing events across the state, you can plan something for the big day or a getaway with your sweetie. Bonus: several of Maryland’s great breweries are even making dessert and Valentine’s Day-themed beers! Get the lowdown on our FeBREWary page.

Put a Thrill in the Chill with a Winter Adventure
