MEDICAL CARE FOR THE SKIN

ALHYDRAN how-to-use

Video Transcription (English)

Alhydran is a medical, hydrating cream for vulnerable and damaged skin. Scientifically based, it's recommended by doctors and skin therapists. Alhydran can be used for various skin problems and complaints. For example scars, aftercare, burns, radiotherapy after-effects, dry, red and irritated skin, and much more. And suitable for all ages, skin types and skin conditions, as aftercare. Alhydran provides optimal, long-lasting skin hydration and prevents moisture loss. Research also shows that itching and redness are reduced and the suppleness and elasticity of the skin improves. You can start using Alhydran right away. Make sure the skin has closed and any stitches or scabs are no longer present. Use Alhydran as often as necessary. For optimal results it is advisable to apply the cream at least three times a day. Alhydran can be used without limit, for years. Alhydran has a high concentration of active ingredients. For this reason your skin only needs a small quantity per treatment. So one tube of Alhydran is very long-lasting. Alhydran absorbs quickly and completely into the skin. Which makes it very suitable for combination with other treatments, such as pressure dressings with support stockings, silicone scar sheets and pressure suits for burn wounds.
