The Ghost of Caesar
A Soothsayer
A Poet

Senators, Citizens, Soldiers, Commoners, Messengers, and Servants
SCENE: Rome, the conspirators' camp near Sardis, and the plains of Philippi.

ACT I. SCENE I.
Rome. A street. Enter Flavius, Marullus, and certain Commoners.

Flavius.
Hence, home, you idle creatures, get you home.
Is this a holiday? What, know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a laboring day without the sign
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Commoner.
Why, sir, a carpenter.

Marullus.
Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?
You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Commoner.
Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Marullus.
But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

Second Commoner.
A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience, which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Marullus.
What trade, thou knave? Thou naughty knave, what trade?

Second Commoner.
Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me; yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Marullus.
What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Second Commoner.
Why, sir, cobble you.

Flavius.
Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Second Commoner.
Truly, Sir, all that I live by is with the awl; I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl, I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flavius.
But wherefore art not in thy shop today?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Second Commoner.
Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes to get myself into more work. But indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Caesar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Marullus.
Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home? What tributaries follow him to Rome

Act I, Scene 1
A street in Rome

Flavius.
Get away from here! home, you lazy creatures, go home!
Is this a holiday? What, don't you know,
Since you are workers, you should not walk around
On a workday without carrying the tools
Of your trade? Speak, what is your trade?

First Commoner.
Why, sir, a carpenter.

Marullus.
Where is your leather apron and your ruler?
Why do you have your best clothes on? You,
Sir, what trade are you?

Second Commoner.
Truly sir, in respect of a fine workman I am only, as you would say, a cobbler.

Marullus.
But what trade are you? Give me a straight answer.

Second Commoner.
A trade, sir, that I hope I may do with a safe conscience, which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Marullus.
What trade, wise guy? You dirty trickster, what trade?

Second Commoner.
No, I beg you, sir, don't be out with me. But if you are out, sir, I can fix you.

Marullus.
What do you mean by that? Fix me, you disrespectful fellow?

Second Commoner.
Why, sir, cobble you.

Flavius.
You are a cobbler, are you?

Second Commoner.
Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl. I don't fool with any worker's matters or women's matters, but with all. I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes. When they are in great danger, I heal them. The most proper men that ever walked on calfskin have walked on my handiwork.

Flavius.
But why are you not in your shop today? Why do you lead these people through the streets?

Second Commoner.
Really, sir, to wear out their shoes, so I will have more work. But actually, sir, we are taking the day off to see Caesar and to celebrate his victory.

Marullus.
Why rejoice? What conquest does he bring home?
What captured prisoners follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day with patient expectation
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome.
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made an universal shout
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks
To hear the echo of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now cull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone!
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flavius.
Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,
Assemble all the poor men of your sort,
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

Exeunt all Commoners.
See whether their basest metal be not moved;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I. Disrobe the images
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Marullus.
May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flavius.
It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar's trophies. I'll about
And drive away the vulgar from the streets;
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

Exeunt.
SCENE II.
A public place.
Flourish. Enter Caesar; Antony, for the course; Calpurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, and Casca; a great crowd follows, among them a Soothsayer.

Caesar.
Calpurnia!
Casca.
Peace, ho! Caesar speaks.
Music ceases.
Caesar.
Calpurnia!
Calpurnia.
Here, my lord.
Caesar.
Stand you directly in Antonio's way, When he doth run his course. Antonio!
Antony.
Caesar, my lord?
Caesar.
Forget not in your speed, Antonio, To touch Calpurnia, for our elders say The barren, touched in this holy chase, Shake off their sterile curse.

Antony.
I shall remember. When Caesar says "Do this," it is perform'd.
Caesar.
Set on, and leave no ceremony out.

Flourish.
Soothsayer.
Caesar!
Caesar.
Ha! Who calls?
Casca.
Bid every noise be still. Peace yet again!
Caesar.
Who is it in the press that calls on me? I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, Cry "Caesar." Speak, Caesar is turn'd to hear.
Soothsayer.
Beware the ides of March.
Caesar.
What man is that?
Brutus.
A soothsayer you beware the ides of March.
Caesar.
Set him before me let me see his face.
Cassius.

Act I, Scene 2
[A public place in Rome]
[A flourish of trumpets announces the approach of Caesar. A large crowd of Commoners has assembled; a Soothsayer is among them. Enter Caesar; his wife, Calpurnia; Portia; Decius; Cicero; Brutus; Cassius; Casca; and Antony, who is stripped down in preparation for running in the games.]

Caesar.
Calpurnia.
Casca.
Be quiet! Caesar speaks.

Caesar.
Calpurnia
Calpurnia.
Here, my lord.
Caesar.
Stand in Antony's path When he runs the race. Antonius.
Antonius.
Caesar, my lord?
Caesar.
In your hurry, don't forget, Antonius, To touch Calpurnia; for the old people say That barren women, touched by someone running in this holy race, Lose the curse of sterility.
Antonius.
I shall remember. When Caesar says "Do this," it is done.
Caesar.
Do what you need to do, and don't leave out any part of the ritual.

[Flourish of trumpets. Caesar starts to leave.]
Soothsayer.
Caesar!
Caesar.
Ha! Who calls me?
Casca.
Tell everyone to be quiet. Silence again!
Caesar.
Who is in the crowd that calls on me? I hear a voice shriller than all the music Cry "Caesar!" Speak. Caesar is turned to hear.
Soothsayer.
Beware the ides of March.
Caesar.
Who is that?
Brutus.
A soothsayer tells you to beware the ides of March.
Caesar.
Put him in front of me; let me see his face.
Cassius.
Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Caesar.

Caesar.
What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Soothsayer.
Beware the ides of March.

Caesar.
He is a dreamer; let us leave him. Pass.

Senet. Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.

Cassius.
Will you go see the order of the course?

Brutus.
Not I.

Cassius.
I pray you, do.

Brutus.
I am not gamesome; I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cassius.
Brutus, I do observe you now of late;
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have;
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Brutus.
Cassius,
Be not deceived; if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviors;
But let not therefore my good friends be grieved-
Among which number, Cassius, be you one-
Nor construe any further my neglect
Than that poor Brutus with himself at war
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cassius.
Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brutus.
No, Cassius, for the eye sees not itself
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cassius.
Tis just,
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye
That you might see your shadow. I have heard
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Caesar, speaking of Brutus
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Fellow, come out of the crowd; look at Caesar.

Caesar.
What do you say to me now? Say it one more time.

Soothsayer.
Beware the ides of March.

Caesar.
He is a dreamer; let us leave him. Pass.

[Trumpets sound. Exit all but Brutus and Cassius.]

Cassius.
Are you going to watch the race?

Brutus.
Not I.

Cassius.
I wish you would.

Brutus.
I do not like sports. I am not Athletic like Antony.
Don't let me spoil, Cassius, what you want to do.
I'll leave you.

Cassius.
Brutus, I have watched you lately;
I have not seen in your eyes the kindness
And friendliness I used to see.
You are being too stubborn and too distant
From your friend who cares about you.

Brutus.
Cassius,
Don't be deceived. If I have hidden my true feelings,
I have been frowning
Only at myself. I have been troubled
Lately by mixed emotions,
Personal matters that concern no one else,
Which are, perhaps, affecting the way I act.
But don't let my good friends be upset
(And you, Cassius, are counted as one of them)
Or interpret my neglect of them as anything more serious
Than that poor Brutus, at war with himself,
Forgets to be friendly to other men.

Cassius.
In that case, Brutus, I have misunderstood your feelings,
Because of which I have kept to myself
Certain important thoughts, worthy ideas.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brutus.
No, Cassius, for the eye cannot see itself
Except when it is reflected by something else.

Cassius.
That's true.
And it is too bad, Brutus, That you don't have any mirrors
That would show
Your inner qualities to you,
So that you could see their reflection. I have heard
That many of the most respected people in Rome
(Except immortal Caesar), speaking about Brutus
And suffering under the troubles of this time,
Have wished that noble Brutus could see himself the way
Brutus.
Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cassius.
Therefore, good Brutus, be prepared to hear,
And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I your glass
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus;
Were I a common laughor, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester, if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

Brutus.
What means this shouting? I do fear the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Cassius.
Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Brutus.
I would not, Cassius, yet I love him well.
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honor in one eye and death i' the other
And I will look on both indifferently.
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honor more than I fear death.

Cassius.
I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favor.
Well, honor is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life, but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.
I was born free as Caesar, so were you;
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the winter's cold as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Caesar said to me, "Darest thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood
And swim to yonder point?" Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in
And bade him follow. So indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.

Flourish and shout.

Brutus.
What does this shouting mean? I am afraid the people
Choose Caesar to be their king.

Cassius.
Ay, are you afraid of it?
Then I must believe that you don't want it to happen.

Brutus.
I don't want it, Cassius, but Caesar is my good friend.
But why do you keep me here so long?
What is it that you want to tell me?
If it is anything concerning the good of Rome,
Put honor on one side and death on the other,
And I will face either one;
For let the gods give me good fortune only
The name of honor more than I fear death.

Cassius.
I know that what you have just said is true about you,
But as I do know your outward favor.
Well, honor is what I want to talk about.
I don't know what you and other people
Think about life, but, just for myself,
I would rather die than live to be
In awe of someone no better than I am.
I was born as free as Caesar, so were you;
We eat the same foods, and we can both
Stand the winter's cold just as well as Caesar.
One time, on a cold and windy day,
When the Tiber River was rising in the storm,
Caesar said to me, "Cassius, I dare you
To leap with me into this angry flood
And swim to that spot way over there." As soon as he said it,
Dressed like I was, I plunged in
And dared him to follow. That's exactly what he did.
The torrent roared, and we fought it
But ere we could arrive the point proposed, Caesar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink!
I, as Aeneas our great ancestor
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
Did I the tired Caesar. And this man
Is now become a god, and Cassius is
A wretched creature and must bend his body
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him I did mark
How he did shake. 'Tis true, this god did shake;
His coward lips did from their color fly,
And that same eye whose bend doth awe the world
Did lose his luster. I did hear him groan.
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans
Mark him and write his speeches in their books,
Alas, it cried, "Give me something to drink, Titinius,"
Just like a sick girl! Ye gods! It doth amaze me
That such a weak man should
Get ahead of the rest of the world
And bear the palm alone..

Shout. Flourish

Brutus.
Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honors that are heap’d on Caesar.

Cassius.
Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs and peep about
To find ourselves dishonorable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves that we are underlings.
Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that "Caesar"?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
"Brutus" will start a spirit as soon as "Caesar."
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed!
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of no noble bloods!
When went there by an age since the great Flood
But it was famed with more than with one man?
When could they say till now that talk'd of Rome
That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.
O, you and I have heard our fathers say
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
With strong muscles, throwing it aside
And conquering it with our spirit of competition.
But before we could arrive at the designated spot, Caesar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I will sink!"
Just like Aeneas, our great ancestor,
Carried the old Anchises from the flames of Troy
On his shoulder, I from the waves of Tiber
Carried the tired Caesar. And this man
Is now considered a god, and Cassius is
A wretched creature and must bow down
If Caesar even carelessly nods at him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when he was having fits, I saw clearly
How he shook. It is true, this god shook.
His lips turned pale,
And that same eye whose glance awes the world
Lost his shine. I heard him groan.
Yes, and that tongue of his that persuaded the Romans
To watch him closely and write his speeches in their books,
Alas, it cried, "Give me something to drink, Titinius,"
Just like a sick girl! You gods! It amazes me
That such a weak man should
Get ahead of the rest of the world
And appear as the victor all by himself.

Shout. Flourish.

Brutus.
The crowd shouts again?
I think that all this applause is
For some new honors that are given to Caesar.

Cassius.
Why, man, he stands with the puny world between his legs
Like a Colossus, and we insignificant men
Walk under his huge legs and look around
To find ourselves dishonorable graves.
Men at some point in time are in charge of their own destinies.
It is not the fault, dear Brutus, of our stars
That we are inferiors, but it is our own fault.
"Brutus" and "Caesar." What is so special about the name "Caesar"?
Why should that name be spoken more than yours?
Write them together: your name looks just as good.
Say them, yours sounds as good.
Weigh them, it is as heavy. Call up spirits with them:
"Brutus" will call up a spirit as soon as "Caesar."
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
What does our Caesar eat
To make him grow so large? It is a shameful time to be living!
Rome, you have lost all your noble people!
Since the great Flood, when was there a time
That wasn't made famous by more than one man?
When could people talking of Rome say (till now)
That her wide walls contained only one man?
Now it is Rome indeed, and plenty of room,
When there is only one man in it! O, you and I have heard
As easily as a king.

Brutus.
That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some aim.
How I have thought of this and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further moved. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear and answer such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cassius.
I am sure that you are my friend
What you are trying to persuade me of, I can guess.
What I think about this, and about these times,
I will tell you later. For right now,
I ask you as a friend not
To try to convince me further. What you have said
I will think about; what you have to say
I will patiently hear, and I will find a time
Appropriate both to hear and to answer such important things.
Until then, my noble friend, chew on this:
Brutus would rather be a villager
Than to represent himself as a son of Rome
Under the difficult conditions that this time in history
Is likely to put on us.

Cassius.
I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter Caesar and his Train.
Brutus.
The games are done, and Caesar is returning.
Cassius.
As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note today.

Brutus.
I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calpurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cassius.
Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Caesar.
Antonio!

Antony.
Caesar?

Caesar.
Let me have men about me that are fat,
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much; such men are dangerous.

Antony.
Fear him not, Caesar; he's not dangerous;
our fathers say
That there was once a man named Brutus who would have tolerated
The eternal devil ruling Rome
As easily as he would a king.

Brutus.
I am sure that you are my friend.
What you are trying to persuade me of, I can guess.

Caesar.
Let me have men around me who are fat,
Sleek-headed men, and men that sleep at night.
Cassius, over there, has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much; such men are dangerous.

Antonius.
Don't be afraid of him, Caesar; he's not dangerous.
He is a noble Roman and well given.
Caesar.
Would he were fatter! But I fear him not,
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men. He loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit
That could be moved to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
While they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear, for always I am Caesar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

_Sennd. Exeunt Caesar and all his Train but Casca._

Casca.
You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Brutus.
Ay, Casca, tell us what hath chanced today
That Caesar looks so sad.

Casca.
Why, you were with him, were you not?

Brutus.
I should not then ask Casca what had chanced.

Casca.
Why, there was a crown offered him, and being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus, and then the people fell ashouting.

Brutus.
What was the second noise for?

Casca.
Why, for that too.

Cassius.
They shouted thrice. What was the last cry for?

Casca.
Why, for that too.

Brutus.
Was the crown offered him thrice?

Casca.
Ay, marry, wast, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other, and at every putting by mine honest neighbors shouted.

Cassius.
Who offered him the crown?

Casca.
Why, Antony.
Brutus.
Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca.
I can as well be hang’d as tell the manner of it. It was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown (yet ’twas not a crown neither, ’twas one of these coronets) and, as I told you, he put it by once. But for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again. But, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refused it, the rabblement hooted and clapped their chopped hands and threw up their sweaty nightcaps and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown that it had almost choked Caesar, for he swounded and fell down at it. And for mine own part, I durst not laugh for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Casca.
I could as easily be hanged as tell how it happened. It was mere foolery; I did not pay attention to it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown—"but it was not a crown either, it was one of these coronets—and, as I told you, he pushed it away once. But for all that, to my thinking, he would gladly have taken it. Then he offered it to him again; then he pushed it away again; but to my thinking, he was very reluctant to take his fingers off of it. And then he offered it the third time. He pushed it away the third time; and still while he refused it, the unruly crowd hooted, and clapped their chapped hands, and threw up their sweaty nightcaps, and let out so much stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown that it, almost, choked Caesar; for he fainted and fell down because of it. And for my own part, I didn't dare laugh, for fear of opening my lips and breathing the bad air.

Cassius.
But, soft, I pray you, what, did Caesars wound?

Casca.
He fell down in the marketplace and foamed at mouth and was speechless.

Brutus.
’Tis very like. He hath the falling sickness.

Cassius.
No, Caesar hath it not, but you, and I, and honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casca.
I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Caesar fell down. If the tagrag people did not clap him and hiss him according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Brutus.
What said he when he came unto himself?

Casca.
Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me open his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. An had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches where I stood cried, "Alas, good soul!” and forgave him with all their hearts. But you can't pay any attention to them. If Caesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done the same thing.

Brutus.
And after that, he came away upset?

Casca.
Ay.
Cassius.
Did Cicero say anything?
Casca.
Ay, he spoke Greek.
Cassius.
To what effect?
Casca.
Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.
Cassius.
Will you sup with me tonight, Casca?
Casca.
No, I am promised forth.
Cassius.
Will you dine with me tomorrow?
Casca.
Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.
Cassius.
Good, I will expect you.
Casca.
Do so, farewell, both.
Exit
Brutus.
What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!
He was quick mettle when he went to school.
Cassius.
So is he now in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.
Brutus.
And so it is. For this time I will leave you.
Tomorrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you, or, if you will,
Come home to me and I will wait for you.
Cassius.
I will do so. Till then, think of the world.
Exit Brutus.
Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see
Thy honorable mettle may be wrought
From that it is disposed; therefore it is meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced?
Caesar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus.
If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius,
He should not humor me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name, wherein obscurely
Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at.
And after this let Caesar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

Throw through his window notes
In different handwriting, as if they came from several people,
All pointing out the great respect
That Rome has for him; in these
Caesar's ambition will be hinted at.
And after this let Caesar establish himself securely.
For we will shake him down from his position or suffer the consequences.

Exit.
SCENE III.
A street.
Thunder and lightning
Enter, from opposite sides,
Casca, with his sword drawn, and Cicero.

Cicero.
Good even, Casca. Brought you Caesar home?
Why are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Casca.
Are not you moved, when all the sway of earth
Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests when the scolding winds
Have rived the knotty oaks, and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam
To be exalted with the threatening clouds,
But never till tonight, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world too saucy with the gods
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cicero.
Why, saw you anything more wonderful?

Casca.
A common slave--you know him well by sight--
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty torches join'd, and yet his hand
Not sensible of fire remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides--I ha' not since put up my sword
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glaz'd upon me and went surly by Without annoying me. And there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women
Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw
Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit
Even at noonday upon the marketplace,
Howling and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say
"These are their reasons; they are natural":
For I believe they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cicero.
Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time.
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.
Comes Caesar to the Capitol tomorrow?

Casca.
He doth, for he did bid Antonio
Send word to you he would be there tomorrow.

Cicero.
Good then, Casca. This disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.

Casca.
Farewell, Cicero.
Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cassius.
Who's there?

Casca.
A Roman.

Cassius.
Casca, by your voice.

Casca.
Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cassius.
A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca.
Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cassius.
Those that have known the earth so full of faults.
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bared my bosom to the thunderstone;
And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca.
But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?
It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cassius.
You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale and gaze
And put on fear and cast yourself in wonder
To see the strange impatience of the heavens.
But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts from quality and kind,
Why old men, fools, and children calculate,
Why all these things change from their ordinance,
Their natures, and preformed faculties
To monstrous quality, why, you shall find
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrous state.
Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca.
'Tis Caesar that you mean, is it not, Cassius?

Cassius.
Let it be who it is, for Romans now
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors.
But, woe the while! Our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca.
Indeed they say the senators tomorrow
Mean to establish Caesar as a king,
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land
In every place save here in Italy.

Cassius.
I know where I will wear this dagger then:
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius.
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat.
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do
I can shake off at pleasure.
[Thunder still.]

Casca.
So can I.
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cassius.
And why should Caesar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep.
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws. What trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar? But, O grief,
Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca.
You speak to Casca, and to such a man
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand.
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.

Cassius.
There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have moved already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honorable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's Porch. For now, this fearful night,
There is no stir or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element
In favor's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna
Cassia.
Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cassius.
'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?

Cinna.
To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?
Cassius.
No, it is Casca, one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cinna.
I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cassius.
Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cinna.
Yes, you are.
O Cassius, if you could
But win the noble Brutus to our party-

Cassius.
Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,
And look you lay it in the praetor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue. All this done,
Repair to Pompey's Porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cinna.
All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cassius.
That done, repair to Pompey's Theatre.
Exit Cinna.
Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house. Three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca.
O, he sits high in all the people's hearts,
And that which would appear offense in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

Cassius.
Him and his worth and our great need of him
You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight, and ere day
At the entrance to Pompey's Theater; because now, on this frightening night,
No one is stirring or walking in the streets,
And the condition of the sky
Looks like the work we have ahead of us,
Bloody, full of fire, and terrible.
[Enter Cinna.]

Cassia.
Stand hidden for awhile, for here comes someone in a hurry.

Cassius.
It's Cinna. I know the way he walks.
He is a friend. Cinna, where are you going in such a hurry?

Cinna.
To find you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?
Cassius.
No, it is Casca, who is now part
Of our plan. Are they waiting for me?

Cinna.
I am glad of it. What a frightening night this is!
Two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cassius.
Are they waiting for me? Tell me.

Cinna.
Yes, they are.
O Cassius, if you could
Only persuade the noble Brutus to join us--

Cassius.
Be satisfied. Good Cinna, take this note
And put it in the judge's seat,
Where Brutus will find it, and throw this one
Through his window. Stick this one with wax
On old Brutus' statue. When you've done all of that,
Go to Pompey's Porch, where you will find us.
Are Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cinna.
Everyone except Metellus Cimber, and he went
To look for you at your house. Well, I'll hurry
To place these papers where you told me.

Cassius.
When you finish, go to Pompey's Theater.
[Exit Cinna.]
Come, Casca, you and I will still before morning
See Brutus at his house. Three-fourths of him
Belongs to us already, and the whole man
Will be ours after we next meet him.

Casca.
O, the people love him.
And something which would seem offensive if we did it,
His face like magic,
Will change so it becomes good and worthy.

Cassius.
Him and his importance and the reason we need him
You have figured out. Let's go,
For it is past midnight, and before day comes
We will awake him and be sure of him.

We will wake him up and make sure he is ours.

Exeunt.
ACT II. SCENE I.

Enter Brutus in his orchard.

Brutus.

What, Lucius, ho!
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly,
When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say! What, Lucius!

Enter Lucius

Lucius.

Call'd you, my lord?

Brutus.

Get me a taper in my study, Lucius.
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Lucius.

I will, my lord.
Exit.

Brutus.

It must be by his death, and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder
And that craves wary walking. Crown him that,
And then, I grant, we put a sting in him
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
Remorse from power, and, to speak truth of Caesar,
I have not known when his affections sway'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Caesar may;
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
Will bear no color for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus, that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which hatch'd would as his kind grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Lucius.

The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint I found

Act II, Scene 1

Brutus' orchard in Rome

Brutus.

Lucius!
There are no stars in the sky
To tell me how close it is to morning. Lucius, I say!
I wish I could sleep that soundly.
When are you coming, Lucius, when? Wake up, I say!
Lucius!

[Enter Lucius from the house.]

Lucius.

Did you call, my lord?

Brutus.

Get a candle and put it in my study, Lucius.
When it is lit, come and find me here.

Lucius.

I will, my lord.

[Exit.]

[Brutus returns to his brooding.]

Brutus.

It can only be solved by Caesar's death; for my part,
I have no personal grudge against him;
I'm thinking only of the general welfare. He wants to be crowned.
The question is, how would that change his personality?
It is the sunshine that brings out the snake,
So walk carefully. Give him a crown,
And then we have put a poisonous bite in him
That he can cause trouble with whenever he wants.
Greatness is abused when it separates
Pity from power. And to tell the truth about Caesar,
I have never known him to be controlled by his heart
Instead of his head. But people often say
That humility is a ladder for young ambition,
Which the person climbing up looks toward;
But once he reaches the top rung,
He then turns his back to the ladder,
And looks into the clouds, scorning the lower levels
Which he climbed upon to reach this high position. This is what Caesar may do.
Then rather than let him do that, we must prevent it. And since the case against Caesar
Can't be proved from what he is like now,
We must shape our argument in this way: That Caesar's true nature, if allowed to develop
Would reach terrible extremes;
So we must think of him as a serpent's egg,
Which, if it hatched, would like all serpents grow dangerous,
And kill him before he hatches.

[Reenter Lucius with a letter.]

Lucius.

The candle is burning in your private room, sir.
While I was searching the window for a match, I found
This paper thus seal'd up, and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Gives him the letter.

Brutus.

Get you to bed again, it is not day.
Is not tomorrow, boy, the ides of March?

Lucius.

I know not, sir.

Brutus.

Look in the calendar and bring me word.

Lucius.

I will, sir.

Exit.

Brutus.

The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them.

Opens the letter and reads.

"Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake and see thyself!
Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, redress!"
"Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!"
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up,
"Shall Rome, etc." Thus must I piece it out.
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
"Speak, strike, redress!" Am I entreated
To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise,
If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Lucius.

Sir, March is wasted fifteen days.

Knocking within.

Brutus.

'Tis good. Go to the gate, somebody knocks.

Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is
Like a phantasma or a hideous dream;
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council, and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Lucius.

Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Brutus.

Is he alone?

Lucius.

This paper, sealed up, and I am sure
It wasn't there when I went to bed.

Opens the letter and reads.

"Brutus, you are asleep. Wake up, and see yourself!
Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, right a wrong!
Brutus, you are asleep. Wake up!"
Suggestions like this have often been dropped
Where I have picked them up.
"Shall Rome, etc." I must guess the rest of the sentence:
Should Rome have such fear and respect for just one man?
What, Rome?
My ancestors drove the Tarquin
From the streets of Rome when he was called a king.
"Speak, strike, right a wrong!" Am I encouraged
To speak and strike? O Rome, I promise you,
If a solution for our troubles will come from my action,
you will get
Everything you ask for from Brutus!

Reenter Lucius.

Lucius.

Sir, we are fifteen days into March.

Knocking within.

Brutus.

That's good. Go to the door; somebody is knocking.

Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first aroused my suspicions concerning Caesar,
I have not slept.
The time between the earliest thought of a terrible act
And the actual performance of it is
Like a nightmare or a hideous dream.
The heart and mind
Debate the subject, while the man himself,
Like a small country, undergoes
A civil war.

Reenter Lucius.

Lucius.

Sir, it's your friend Cassius at the door,
Who wants to see you.

Brutus.

Is he alone?

Lucius.
No, sir, there are more with him.

Brutus.
Do you know them?

Lucius.
No, sir, their hats are pluck’d about their ears,
And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favor.

Brutus.
Let ’em enter.

Exit Lucius.

They are the faction. O Conspiracy,
Shamest thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free? O, then, by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none,
Conspiracy;
Hide it in smiles and affability;
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the conspirators, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna,
Metellus Cimber, and Trebonius.

Cassius.
I think we are too bold upon your rest.
Good morrow, Brutus, do we trouble you?

Brutus.
I have been up this hour, awake all night.
Know I these men that come along with you?

Cassius.
Yes, every man of them, and no man here
But honors you, and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Brutus.
He is welcome hither.

Cassius.
This, Decius Brutus.

Brutus.
He is welcome too.

Cassius.
This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.

Brutus.
They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cassius.
Shall I entreat a word?

They whisper.

Decius.
Here lies the east. Doth not the day break here?

Cassius.
No.
Cinna.
O, pardon, sir, it doth, and yongrey lines
That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca.
You shall confess that you are both deceived.
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises,
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire, and the high east
Stands as the Capitol, directly here.

Brutus.
Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cassius.
And let us swear our resolution.

Brutus.
No, not an oath. If not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time’s abuse-
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards and to steel with valor
The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen,
What need we any spur but our own cause
To prick us to redress? What other bond
Than secret Romans that have spoke the word
And will not palter? And what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engaged
That this shall be or we will fall for it?
Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause or our performance
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass’d from him.

Cassius.
But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca.
Let us not leave him out.
Cinna.
No, by no means.
Metellus.
O, let us have him, for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds.
It shall be said his judgement ruled our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.
Brutus.
O, name him not; let us not break with him,
For he will never follow anything
That other men begin.
Cassius.
Then leave him out.
Casca.
Indeed he is not fit.
Decius.
Shall no man else be touch'd but only Caesar?
Cassius.
Decius, well urged. I think it is not meet
Mark Antony, so well beloved of Caesar,
Should outlive Caesar. We shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and you know his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all, which to prevent,
Let Antony and Caesar fall together.
Brutus.
Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off and then hack the limbs
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Caesar.
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar,
And in the spirit of men there is no blood.
O, that we then could come by Caesar's spirit,
And not dismember Caesar! But, alas,
Caesar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds;
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious,
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him,
For he can do no more than Caesar's arm
When Caesar's head is off.

Cassius.
Yet I fear him,
For in the ingratiated love he bears to Caesar--
Brutus.

Cinna.
Yes, by all means.
Metellus.
O, let us get Cicero to join us! His age
Will get us popular support
And people to praise what we do.
People will say that his sound judgement controlled us;
Our youth and wildness will not be noticed but will be hidden in his seriousness.
Brutus.
Don't mention him! Let us not confide in him,
For he will never follow anything
That is started by anyone but himself.
Cassius.
Then leave him out.
Casca.
Indeed, he is not suitable.
Decius.
Shall we kill only Caesar?
Cassius.
Decius, good point. I think it is not proper
That Mark Antony, Caesar's good friend,
Should outlive Caesar. We will find that he is
A schemer, and you know,
If he had more power, he could be
Trouble for us; To prevent this,
Let Antony and Caesar die together.
Brutus.
Our actions will seem too violent, Caius Cassius,
If we cut the head off and then hack at the limbs,
Like we were killing in anger with hatred afterwards;
Antony is only a limb of Caesar.
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar,
And in the spirit of men there is no blood.
If only we could remove Caesar's soul
Without destroying his body! But, alas,
Caesar must bleed for it! And, good friends,
Let's kill him boldly but not angrily;
Let's carve him like a dish fit for the gods,
Not chop him up like the body of an animal to be fed to dogs.
Let our hearts treat our hands the way sly masters do;
We will provoke our hands to do our dirty work in anger,
Then later scold them for what they have done. This will make
Our purpose necessary and not the result of jealousy.
When the public sees this,
We will be called healer, not murderers.
As far as Mark Antony's concerned, forget about him;
He cannot do any more damage than Caesar's arm can do
When Caesar's head is removed.
Cassius.
Still I'm afraid of him,
For in his deep-rooted friendship to Caesar--
Brutus.
Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him.
If he love Caesar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought and die for Caesar.
And that were much he should, for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Trebonius.
There is no fear in him—let him not die,
For he will live and laugh at this hereafter.

Clock strikes.

Brutus.
Peace, count the clock.

Cassius.
The clock hath stricken three.

Trebonius.
’Tis time to part.

Cassius.
But it is doubtful yet
Whether Caesar will come forth today or no,
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.
It may be these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustomed terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers
May hold him from the Capitol today.

Decius.
Never fear that. If he be so resolved,
I can o’ersway him, for he loves to hear
That unicorns may be betray’d with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered.
Let me work;
For I can give his humor the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cassius.
Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Brutus.
By the eighth hour. Is that the uttermost?

Cinna.
Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Metellus.
Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey.
I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Brutus.
Now, good Metellus, go along by him.
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I’ll fashion him.

Cassius.
The morning comes upon ‘s. We’ll leave you, Brutus,
And, friends, disperse yourselves, but all remember
What you have said and show yourselves true Romans.

Alas, good Cassius, don’t think about him!
If he cares for Caesar, the only thing he can do
Is to himself—Become depressed, and die for Caesar.
Mark Antony isn’t likely to kill himself; he loves
Sports, wildness, and socializing too much to do such a thing.

Trebonius.
We have nothing to fear from him. Let’s not kill him,
For he will live and laugh at this later.

Brutus.
Quiet! Count the chimes of the clock.

Cassius.
The clock struck three.

Trebonius.
It’s time to go.

Cassius.
But we still don’t know
Whether Caesar will leave his house today or not;
He has become superstitious lately,
In contrast to the strong views he once had
Of fantasies, dreams, and omens.
These strange events,
The unusual terrors tonight,
And the arguments of his fortune-tellers
May keep him away from the Capitol today.

Decius.
Don’t be afraid of that. If he decides to stay home,
I can change his mind; he loves to hear
That unicorns can be trapped with trees
And bears with mirrors, elephants with pitfalls,
Lions with nets, and men with flatterers;
But when I tell him that he hates flatterers,
He says he does, although at that moment he is flattered.
Let me work,
For I can get him into the right mood,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cassius.
That’s the latest, and don’t fail then.

Metellus.
Caius Ligarius has a grudge against Caesar,
Who criticized him for supporting Pompey.
I’m surprised none of you thought of him.

Brutus.
Now, good Metellus, go get him.
He is my friend, for good reason.
Send him to me, and I’ll persuade him.

Cassius.
Morning is coming. We’ll leave you, Brutus.
And, friends, scatter yourselves; but everyone remember
What you have said and prove yourselves true Romans.
Brutus.
Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes,
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untired spirits and formal constancy.
And so, good morrow to you every one.

Exit all but Brutus.
Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter.
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber;
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Portia.
Brutus, my lord!

Brutus.
Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Portia.
Nor for yours neither. have ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper
You suddenly arose and walk’d about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across;
And when I ask’d you what the matter was,
You stared upon me with ungentle looks.
I urged you further; then you scratch’d your head,
And too impatiently stamp’d with your foot.
Yet I insisted, yet you answer’d not,
But with an angry waiter of your hand
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem’d too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humor,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And, could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail’d on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Brutus.
I am not well in health, and that is all.

Portia.
Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.

Brutus.
Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.

Portia.
Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced and suck up the humors
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the night
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus,
Brutus.
Good gentlemen, look rested and happy.
Let’s not let our appearances reveal what we are planning to do,
But carry it off like our Roman actors do,
With untired spirits and consistent dignity,
And so good day to each of you.

[Exit all but Brutus.]
Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It doesn't matter.
Enjoy your rest.
You have no dreams
Which busy worry puts in the brains of men;
That's why you sleep so soundly.

[Enter Portia, Brutus' wife.]

Portia.
Brutus, my lord!

Brutus.
Portia! What are you doing? Why are you up at this hour?
It is not healthy for you to expose
Your weak body to the raw cold morning.

Portia.
It is not good for you, either. You have unkindly, Brutus,
Sneaked out of my bed. And last night at supper
You suddenly got up and walked around, thinking and sighing with your arms crossed;
And when I asked you what the matter was,
You stared at me with unfriendly expressions.
I asked again, then you scratched your head
And too impatiently stamped with your foot.
Still I insisted, and still you would not answer,
But with an angry gesture of your hand
You motioned for me to leave you. So I did,
Because I was afraid of making your impatience even greater, and also
I hoped it was only an effect of your mood,
Which affects every man at some time.
It will not let you eat or talk or sleep,
And if it could change your appearance
The way it has changed your personality,
I would not recognize you, Brutus. Dear husband,
Tell me what is upsetting you.

Brutus.
I am not feeling well, and that is all.

Portia.
Brutus is wise, and, if he were sick,
He would do what was necessary to get well.

Brutus.
That's what I'm doing. Good Portia, go to bed.

Portia.
Do you expect me to believe that you're sick? Is it healthy
To walk without a coat and breathe the air
Of a damp morning? Is Brutus sick,
And he will sneak out of his wholesome bed
To risk the terrible diseases of the night,
And tempt the unhealthy air that is not yet cleansed by the sun,
You have some sick offense within your mind,
Which by the right and virtue of my place
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once commended beauty,
By all your vows of love and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy and what men tonight
Have had resort to you; for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Brutus.
Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Portia.
I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus’ harlot, not his wife.

Brutus.
You are my true and honorable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Portia.
If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife.
I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman well reputed, Cato’s daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father’d and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose ‘em.
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound
Here in the thigh. Can I bear that with patience
And not my husband’s secrets?

Brutus.
O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

Knocking within.

Hark, hark, one knocks. Portia, go in awhile,
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows.
Leave me with haste.

[Exit Portia.]

Lucius, who’s that knocks?

Re-enter Lucius with Ligarius.

Lucius.
Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

To make him even sicker? No, my Brutus,
You have a sickness of the mind,
Which, because I am your wife,
I ought to know about; and on my knees
I beg you, by my once-praised beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
That joined us and made us one,
That you tell me, yourself, your half,
Why you are sad, and what men tonight
Have met with you; for six or seven men
Have been here, who hid their faces
Even from darkness.

Brutus.
Don’t kneel, gentle Portia.

Portia.
I would not need to if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it accepted that I shouldn’t know any secrets
That relate to you? Am I yourself
Only partially or in a limited way?
To keep you company at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Do I live only on the outskirts
Of your life? If that’s all,
Portia is Brutus’ prostitute, not his wife.

Brutus.
You are my true and honorable wife,
As important to me as the blood
That visits my sad heart.

Portia.
If this were true, then I would know this secret.
I admit that I am a woman, but also
A woman well respected, Cato’s daughter.
Do you think I am no stronger than my gender,
With such a father and such a husband?
Tell me your secret; I will not disclose it.
I have proved my strength
By wounding myself
Here, in the thigh. Can I stand that pain,
And not my husband’s secrets?

Brutus.
O you gods,
Make me worthy of this noble wife.

[Knocking within.]

Listen! Someone’s knocking, Portia, go inside for awhile,
And soon you shall hear
The secrets of my heart.
I will explain all my dealings
And the reason for my sad looks.
Leave me quickly.

[Exit Portia.]

Lucius, who’s knocking?

[Reenter Lucius with Caius-Ligarius.]

Lucius.
Here is a sick man who wishes to speak with you.
Brutus.
Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how?

Ligarius.
Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Brutus.
O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick!

Ligarius.
I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honor.

Brutus.
Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Ligarius.
By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome!
Brave son, derived from honorable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjured up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible,
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Brutus.
A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Ligarius.
But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Brutus.
That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going
To whom it must be done.

Ligarius.
Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fired I follow you,
To do I know not what; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Brutus.
Follow me then.

Exit.
Act II, Scene 2

Caesar's house in Rome
[Enter Caesar in his nightgown.]

Caesar
Heaven and earth have not been at peace tonight.
Three times Calpurnia has cried out in her sleep,
"Help! They are murdering Caesar!" Who's there?
[Enter a servant.]

Servant
My lord?

Caesar
Go and ask the priests to make a sacrifice right away,
Then come and tell me the results.

Servant
I will, my lord.

[Exit.]

[Enter Caesar's wife, Calpurnia, alarmed.]

Calpurnia
What are you doing, Caesar? Are you planning to go out?
You are not going to set foot out of the house today.

Caesar
Caesar shall go forth. The things that have threatened me
Have never looked at anything but
The face of Caesar, they will vanish.

Calpurnia
Caesar, I have never believed in omens,
But now they frighten me. There is a man inside,
Who tells of horrible sights seen by the watch,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen.
A lioness has given birth in the streets,
And graves have opened and given up their dead.
Fierce fiery warriors fought in the clouds
In ranks and squadrons and proper military formation,
Which rained blood on the Capitol.
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses neighed, and dying men groaned,
And ghosts shrieked and squealed through the streets.
O Caesar, these things are not like anything we are used to,
And I am afraid of them!

Caesar
How can anyone avoid
Something that is planned by the mighty gods?
But Caesar will go forth, since these predictions
Apply to the world in general, not just to Caesar.

Calpurnia
When beggars die no one sees comets;
The heavens themselves proclaim with meteors and comet the death of princes.

Caesar
Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant taste death only once.
Of all the strange things I have heard so far,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?

Servant.
They would not have you to stir forth today.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Caesar.
The gods do this in shame of cowardice.
Caesar should be a beast without a heart
If he should stay at home today for fear.
No, Caesar shall not. Danger knows full well
That Caesar is more dangerous than he.
We are two lions litter’d in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible.
And Caesar shall go forth.

Calpurnia.
Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
Do not go forth today. Call it my fear
That keeps you in the house and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the Senate House,
And he shall say you are not well today.
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Caesar.
Mark Antony shall say I am not well,
And, for thy humor, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Decius.
Caesar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Caesar!
I come to fetch you to the Senate House.

Caesar.
And you are come in very happy time
To bear my greeting to the senators
And tell them that I will not come today.
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come today. Tell them so, Decius.

Calpurnia.
Say he is sick.

Caesar.
Shall Caesar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far
To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Caesar will not come.

Decius.
Most mighty Caesar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Caesar.
The cause is in my will: I will not come,
That is enough to satisfy the Senate.
But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home;

It seems to me the most strange that men are afraid,
Since death, the unavoidable end,
Will come when it will come.

[Reenter servant.]

What do the fortune tellers say?

Servant.
They don't want you to go out today.
Pulling the insides of an offering out,
They could not find a heart inside the animal.

Caesar.
The gods do this in order to shame cowardice.
Caesar will be a beast without a heart
If he stays home today because of fear.
No, Caesar will not. Danger knows full well
That Caesar is more dangerous than he is.
We are two lions born at the same time,
And I am the oldest and most frightening of the two,
And Caesar will go forth.

Calpurnia.
Alas, my lord!
Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
Do not go forth today. Say that it is my fear
That keeps you in the house and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the Senate House,
And he will say that you are not well today.
Let me on my knee have this request.

Caesar.
Mark Antony will say I am not well,
And because of your mood I will stay at home.

[Enter Decius.]

Here's Decius Brutus. He will take the message.

Decius.
Caesar, all hail! Good morning, worthy Caesar!
I have come to bring you to the Senate House.

Caesar.
And you have come at the right time
To take my greetings to the senators
And tell them that I will not come today.
Cannot is a lie; and that I am afraid to is a bigger lie.
I will not come today. Tell them that, Decius.

Calpurnia.
Say that he is sick.

Caesar.
Shall Caesar send a lie?
Have I stretched my arm so far in conquest
And now I'm afraid to tell old men the truth?
Decius, go tell them Caesar will not come.

Decius.
Most mighty Caesar, tell me some reason,
Or else I will be laughed at when I tell them this.

Caesar.
The reason is in my will; I will not come.
That is enough to satisfy the Senate;
But for your own peace of mind,
Because I am your friend, I will let you know.
Calpurnia here, my wife, keeps me at home.
She dreamt tonight she saw my statue,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood, and many lusty Romans
Came smiling and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings and portents
And evils imminent, and on her knee
Hath begg’d that I will stay at home today.

Decius.
This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate.
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bathed,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia’s dream is signified.

Caesar.
And this way have you well expounded it.

Decius.
I have, when you have heard what I can say.
And know it now, the Senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Caesar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render’d, for someone to say
"Break up the Senate till another time,
When Caesar’s wife shall meet with better dreams."
If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper
"Lo, Caesar is afraid"?
Pardon me, Caesar, for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
And reason to my love is liable.

Caesar.
How foolish do your fears seem now, Calpurnia!
I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go.

Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca,
Trebonius, and Cinna.
And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Publius.
Good morrow, Caesar.

Caesar.
Welcome, Publius.
What, Brutus, are you stirr’d so early too?
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Caesar was ne’er so much your enemy
As that same ague which hath made you lean.
What is’t o’clock?

Brutus.
Caesar, ’tis strucken eight.

Caesar.
I thank you for your pains and courtesy.
Enter Antony.
See, Antony, that revels long o’ nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.

Antony.
So to most noble Caesar.

Caesar.
Bid them prepare within.
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now, Cinna; now, Metellus; what, Trebonius,
I have an hour’s talk in store for you;
Remember that you call on me today;
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Trebonius.
Caesar, I will. [Aside.] And so near will I be
That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Caesar.
Good friends, go in and taste some wine with me,
And we like friends will straightway go together.

Brutus.
[Aside.] That every like is not the same, O Caesar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon!

Exeunt
SCENE III.

A street near the Capitol.

Enter Artemidorus, reading paper.

Artemidorus.

"Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you. Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee!

Thy lover, Artemidorus."

Here will I stand till Caesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Caesar, thou mayest live;
If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive.

Exit.

Act II, Scene 3

A street in Rome near the Capitol, close to Brutus' house

[Enter Artemidorus, reading a paper.]

Artemidorus.

"Caesar, beware of Brutus; watch out for Cassius; stay away from Casca; keep an eye on Cinna; don't trust Trebonius; observe Metellus Cimber carefully; Decius Brutus does not like you; you have offended Caius Ligarius. All these men have the same goal, and it is against Caesar. If you are not immortal, look around you. Overconfidence allows a conspiracy to succeed. The mighty gods defend you!

"Your devoted Friend,
"Artemidorus."

I will stand here until Caesar passes by
And like a suitor I will give him this.
My heart grieves that greatness cannot avoid
The sharp teeth of envy.
If you read this, O Caesar, you might live;
If not, the Fates plot with traitors.
SCENE IV.

Another part of the same street, before the house of Brutus.
Enter Portia and Lucius.

Portia.
I prithee, boy, run to the Senate House; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone. Why dost thou stay?

Lucius.
To know my errand, madam.

Portia.
I would have had thee there, and here again, Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there. O constancy, be strong upon my side! Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue! I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel! Art thou here yet?

Lucius.
Madam, what should I do? Run to the Capitol, and nothing else? And so return to you, and nothing else?

Portia.
Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well, For he went sickly forth; and take good note What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him. Hark, boy, what noise is that?

Lucius.
I hear none, madam.

Portia.
Prithee, listen well. I heard a bustling rumor like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Lucius.
Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer

Portia.
Come hither, fellow; Which way hast thou been?

Soothsayer.
At mine own house, good lady.

Portia.
What is't o'clock?

Soothsayer.
About the ninth hour, lady.

Portia.
Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Soothsayer.
Madam, not yet. I go to take my stand To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Portia.
Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?

Soothsayer.
That I have, lady. If it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Portia.
Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Soothsayer.
None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.
Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow,
The throng that follows Caesar at the heels,
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death.
I'll get me to a place more void and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

Exit.

Portia.
I must go in. Ay me, how weak a thing
The heart of woman is! O Brutus,
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!
Sure, the boy heard me. Brutus hath a suit
That Caesar will not grant. O, I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;
Say I am merry. Come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Exeunt severally.

To do himself a favor and listen to me,
I shall beg him to act as his own friend.

Portia.
Why, do you know of any harm planned toward him?

Soothsayer.
None that I am certain of, much that I am afraid may happen.
Good day to you. Here the street is narrow.
The crowd that follows at Caesar's heels,
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death.
I'll move to a more open place and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

Exit.
ACT III. SCENE I.

Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above. A crowd of people, among them Artemidorus and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Popilius, Publius, and others.

Caesar.
The ides of March are come.

Soothsayer.
Ay, Caesar, but not gone.

Artemidorus.
Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.

Decius.
Trebonius doth desire you to o'er read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Artemidorus.
O Caesar, read mine first, for mine's a suit
That touches Caesar nearer. Read it, great Caesar.

Caesar.
What touches us ourself shall be last served.

Artemidorus.
Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.

Caesar.
What, is the fellow mad?

Publius.
Sirrah, give place.

Cassius.
What, urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

Caesar goes up to the Senate House, the rest follow.

Popilius.
I wish your enterprise today may thrive.

Cassius.
What enterprise, Popilius?

Popilius.
Fare you well.

Advances to Caesar.

Brutus.
What said Popilius Lena?

Cassius.
He wish'd today our enterprise might thrive.
I fear our purpose is discovered.

Brutus.
Look, how he makes to Caesar. Mark him.

Cassius.

Act III, Scene 1

[The senate sits on a higher level, waiting for Caesar to appear. Artemidorus and the Soothsayer are among the crowd. A flourish of trumpets. Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Popilius, and others. Caesar stops in front of the Soothsayer.]

Caesar
The ides of March have arrived.

Soothsayer
Yes, Caesar, but not left.

[Artemidorus steps up to Caesar with his warning.]

Artemidorus
Hail, Caesar! Read this document.

[Decius steps up quickly with another paper.]

Decius
Trebonius would like you to read over
(When you have time) this his humble request.

Artemidorus
O Caesar, read mine first, because mine's a request
That is more personally important to Caesar. Read it, great Caesar!

Caesar
What is important to us personally shall be dealt with last.

[Caesar pushes the paper aside and turns away.]

Artemidorus
Don't wait, Caesar. Read it right now!

Caesar
What, is this man crazy?

Publius
Boy, get out of the way!

[Cassius and the other conspirators force Artemidorus away from Caesar.]

Cassius
What enterprise, Popilius?

Popilius
Fare you well.

Advances to Caesar.

Brutus
What did Popilius Lena say?

Cassius
He hoped that our enterprise today would be successful.
I am afraid our plot has been discovered.

Brutus
Look how he approaches Caesar. Watch him.

Cassius
Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.
Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known,
Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.

Brutus.
Cassius, be constant.
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

Cassius.
Trebonius knows his time, for, look you, Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

Exeunt Antony and Trebonius.

Decius.
Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him
And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

Brutus.
He is address'd; press near and second him.

Cinna.
Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Caesar.
Are we all ready? What is now amiss
That Caesar and his Senate must redress?

Metellus.
Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart.

Kneels.

Caesar.
I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couchings and these lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men
And turn preordination and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond
To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools—I mean sweet words,
Low-crooked court'sies, and base spaniel-fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished.
If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Caesar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.

Metellus.
Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear
For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Brutus.
I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar,
Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Caesar.
What, Brutus?
Cassius.
Pardon, Caesar! Caesar, pardon!
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Caesar.
I could be well moved, if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks;
They are all fire and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So in the world, 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshaked of motion; and that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this;
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cinna.
O Caesar-

Caesar.
Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Decius.
Great Caesar-

Caesar.
Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca.
Speak, hands, for me!
Casca first, then the other Conspirators and Marcus Brutus stab Caesar.

Caesar.
Et tu, Brute?- Then fall, Caesar!

Dies.

Cinna.
Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cassius.
Some to the common pulpits and cry out
"Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

Brutus.
People and senators, be not affrighted,
Fly not, stand still; ambition's debt is paid.

Casca.
Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Decius.
And Cassius too.

Brutus.
Where's Publius?

Cinna.
Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Cassius
Pardon me, Caesar! Caesar, pardon me!
Cassius falls as low as your foot
To beg for freedom for Publius Cimber.

Caesar
I could be well moved, if I were like you;
If I could beg others to be moved, then begging would move me;
But I am as steady as the Northern Star,
Which has no equal in the sky
Of its true and immovable nature.
The skies are painted with uncounted sparks;
They are all fire, and every one shines;
But there's only one that stays in the same place.
It's the same way in the world: it is well supplied with men.
And men are flesh and blood, and intelligent,
Yet out of all of them I know only one
That, unable to be attacked, holds his position,
Unmoved; and that I am that man,
Let me show you, even in this example,
That I was firm that Cimber should be banished.
And I am still firm to keep him that way.

Cinna
My hands will speak for me!
[They stab Caesar. Casca, the others in turn, then Brutus.]

Caesar
Et tu, Brute?--Then fall Caesar!

Dies.

Cinna
Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!
Run from here, tell the news, shout it on the streets!

Cassius
Some of you go to the speakers' platforms and call out,
"Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

Brutus
People and Senators, do not be afraid.
Don't run away; stand still. Ambition's debt has been paid.

Casca
Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Decius
And Cassius, too.

Brutus
Where's Publius?

Cinna
He's here, very confused by this rebellion.
Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's
Stand close together, in case one of Caesar's friends
Should chance--
Should happen--

Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer,
Don't talk about standing! Publius, be cheerful.
There is no harm intended to your person,
We do not intend to harm you
Nor to no Roman else. So tell them, Publius.
Nor any other Roman. Tell them that, Publius.

And leave us, Publius, lest that the people
And leave us, Publius, or else the people,
Rushing on us should do your age some mischief.
Rushing on us, might harm you, an old man.

Do so, and let no man abide this deed
Do that, and don't let any man suffer for what happened
But we the doers.
But we, the men who did it.

Re-enter Trebonius.
[Reenter Trebonius.]

Where is Antony?
Where is Antony?

He ran to his house, astonished.
He ran to his house, astonished.

Men, wives, and children stare, cry out, and run
Men, wives, and children stare, cry out, and run,
As it were doomsday.
As if it were the end of the world.

Fates, we will know your pleasures.
Fates, we will know what you plan for us.
That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time
We know that we will die; it is only when,
And drawing days out that men stand upon.
And increasing their allotted days, that men care about.

Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life
Why the person who removes twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Removes that many years of fearing death.

Grant that, and then is death a benefit;
If you accept that, then death is a benefit.
So are we Caesar's friends that have abridged
So we are Caesar's friends, who have shortened
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood
And let's bathe our hands in Caesar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords;
Up to the elbows and smear our swords.
Then walk we forth, even to the marketplace,
Then we will walk forth, as far as the marketplace,
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
And waving our red weapons over our heads,
Let's all cry, "Peace, freedom, and liberty!"
Let's all shout, "Peace, freedom, and liberty!"

Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence
Stoop then and wash. How many years from now
Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
Will this lofty scene of ours be acted out
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!
In countries not yet created and languages not yet spoken!

How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,
How many times will Caesar bleed in plays,
That now on Pompey's basis lies along
Who now lies on Pompey's base
No worthier than the dust!
No more important than the dust.

So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.
The men that gave their country liberty.

What, shall we forth?
What, shall we go out?

Ay, every man away.
Yes, we'll all go.
Brutus shall lead, and we will grace his heels
Brutus will lead, and we will honor him by following
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.
With the boldest and the best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.
[Enter a Servant.]

Brutus
Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Servant.
Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel,
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down,
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving.
Say I love Brutus and I honor him;
Say I fear'd Caesar, honored him, and loved him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him and be resolved
How Caesar hath deserved to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead
So well as Brutus living, but he will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Brutus.
Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied and, by my honor,
Depart untouch'd.

Servant.
I'll fetch him presently.
Exit.

Brutus.
I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cassius.
I wish we may, but yet have I a mind
That fears him much, and my misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Brutus.
But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.

Antony.
O mighty Caesar! Dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank.
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Caesar's death's hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfill your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die;
No place will please me so, no means of death,
As here by Caesar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Brutus.
O Antony, beg not your death of us!

Quiet! Who's here? A friend of Antony's.

Servant
Like this, Brutus, my master told me to kneel;
Like this Mark Antony told me to fall down;
And lying face down, he told me to say this:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving.
Say I love Brutus and I honor him;
Say I feared Caesar, honored him, and loved him.
If Brutus will promise that Antony
May safely come to him and be given an explanation
Why Caesar deserved to die,
Mark Antony will not love Caesar, who is dead,
As well as Brutus, who is alive, but he will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Through the hazards of this new, untried government
Faithfully. This is what my master Antony says.

Brutus
Your master is a wise and valiant Roman.
I never thought of him as anything worse than that.
Tell him, if he chooses to come here,
He shall receive a satisfactory explanation and, by my honor,
Leave here without being touched.

Servant
I'll get him immediately.

[Exit.]

Brutus
I know that we will convince him to be our friend.

Cassius
I hope so. But still I am
Afraid of him; and my misgivings are usually accurate.

[Reenter Antony.]

Brutus
But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.

Antony
O mighty Caesar! Do you lie so low?
Are all your conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, shrunk to this small amount? Fare you well.
I don't know, gentlemen, what your plans are,
Who else must have his blood let, who else is diseased.
If I myself, there is no better time
Than the time of Caesar's death; nor any instrument
Half as worthy as your swords, which have been made rich
With the most noble blood in the whole world.
I beg you, if you have a grudge against me,
Now, while your blood-stained hands stink and smoke,
Do what you want. If I live a thousand years,
I will not find myself as ready to die;
No place will please me as much, no method of death,
As next to Caesar, and by you killed,
The greatest men of this time.

Brutus
O Antony, do not beg us to kill you!
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands and this our present act
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And this the bleeding business they have done.
Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome-
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity
Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony;
Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cassius.
Your voice shall be as strong as any man's
In the dispensing of new dignities.

Brutus.
Only be patient till we have appeased
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Antony.
I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours;
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all—alas, what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true!
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! In the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart,
Here didst thou fall, and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy Lethe.
O world, thou wast the forest to this hart,
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.
How like a deer stricken by many princes
Dost thou here lie!

Cassius.
Mark Antony—

Although right now we must seem bloody and cruel,
Because of our hands and this recent action
Which you can see we did, still you only see our hand
And this bleeding business that they have done.
You do not see our heart. They are pitiful;
And pity for the troubles of Rome
(As one fire consumes another, so our pity for Rome consumed our pity for Caesar)
Has done this thing to Caesar. As far as you are concerned,
Our swords are harmless to you, Mark Antony.
Our arms, strong in hate, and our hearts,
Full of brotherly feelings, welcome you
With all kinds of love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cassius
You will have as much to say as anyone
In handing out honors from the new government.

Brutus
Just be patient until we have calmed
The crowds, who are beside themselves with fear,
And then we will explain to you the reason
Why I, who was Caesar's friend when I struck him,
Acted the way I did.

Antony
I do not doubt your wisdom.
Let each of you give me his bloody hand.
First, Marcus Brutus, I will shake hands with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours.
Although you are last, you are not the least in friendship,
yours, good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all of you—Alas, what shall I say?
My reputation now stands on such slippery ground
That you must think of me in one of two bad ways,
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I was your friend, Caesar, O, it's true!
If your spirit looks in on us now,
Won't it grieve you more terribly than your death
To see Antony making his piece,
Shaking the bloody hands of your enemies,
Most noble! in the presence of your corpse?
If I had as many eyes as you have wounds,
Weeping as fast as they bleed,
It would be more appropriate than to reach an agreement
In friendship with your enemies.
Forgive me, Julius! Here is the place where you were trapped, brave hart;
Here you fell; and here your hunters stand,
Marked with your blood, and red in your death.
O world, you were the forest for his hart;
And he was truly, O world, your heart!
Just like a deer, struck down by many princes,
Do you lie here!

Cassius
Mark Antony—
Antony.
Pardon me, Caius Cassius.
The enemies of Caesar shall say this:
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cassius.
I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Antony.
Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all and love you all,
Upon this hope that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Caesar was dangerous.

Brutus.
Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Antony.
That's all I seek;
And am moreover suitor that I may
Produce his body to the marketplace,
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Brutus.
You shall, Mark Antony.

Cassius.
Brutus, a word with you.

[Aside to Brutus.] You know not what you do. Do not consent
That Antony speak in his funeral.
Know you how much the people may be moved
By that which he will utter?

Brutus.
By your pardon,
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar's death.
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cassius.
I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Brutus.
Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar,
And say you do't by our permission,
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral. And you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Antony.
Be it so,
I do desire no more.

Brutus.
Prepare the body then, and follow us.

Exeunt all but Antony.

Antony.

O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy
(Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity choked with custom of fell deeds,
And Caesar's spirit ranging for revenge,
With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
Cry "Havoc!" and let slip the dogs of war,
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.
You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not?

Servant.
I do, Mark Antony.

Antony.
Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Servant.
He did receive his letters, and is coming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth—
O Caesar!
Sees the body.

Antony.
Thy heart is big; get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching, for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Servant.
He lies tonight within seven leagues of Rome.

Antony.
Post back with speed and tell him what hath chanced.
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet stay awhile,
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corse
Into the marketplace. There shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men,
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.
Exeunt with Caesar's body.

Don't go back until I have taken this corpse
Into the marketplace. There I will find out
In my speech how the people react
To the cruel action of these bloody men,
Depending on which you shall tell
Young Octavius how things stand.
Give me a hand.
[Exit with Caesar's body.]
SCENE II.
The Forum. Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens.
We will be satisfied! Let us be satisfied!

Brutus.
Then follow me and give me audience, friends.
Cassius, go you into the other street
And part the numbers.
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Caesar's death.

First Citizen.
I will hear Brutus speak.

Second Citizen.
I will hear Cassius and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.

Exit Cassius, with some Citizens.

Brutus goes into the pulpit.

Third Citizen.
The noble Brutus is ascended. Silence!

Brutus.
Be patient till the last. Romans, countrymen, and lovers! Hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear. Believe me for mine honor, and have respect to mine honor, that you may believe. Censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead to live all freemen? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honor him; but as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love, joy for his fortune, honor for his valor, and death for his ambition. Who is here so rude that would be a bondman? If any, speak, for him have I offended. Who is here so sly that will not love his country? If any, speak, for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All.
None, Brutus, none.

Brutus.
Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol, his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his

Act III, Scene 2
[Enter Brutus and Cassius and a throng of Citizens, disturbed by the death of Caesar.]

Citizens
We want an explanation! Give us an explanation!

Brutus
Then follow me and listen to me, friends.
Cassius, you go into the other street
And divide the crowd.
Let those who want to hear me speak stay here;
Let those who want to follow Cassius go with him;
And we will tell the people of our reasons
For killing Caesar.

First Citizen
I will listen to Brutus.

Second Citizen
I will listen to Cassius, and compare their reasons when we've heard them explained separately.

Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens. Brutus goes into the pulpit.

Third Citizen
The noble Brutus has reached the pulpit. Silence!

Brutus
Be patient until the end. Romans, countrymen, and dear friends, hear me for my cause, and be silent, so that you can hear. Believe me because of my honor, and respect my honor, so that you may believe. Judge me in your wisdom, and pay attention so that you may be a better judge. If there is anyone in this crowd, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say that Brutus was as concerned about Caesar as he was. If that friend then demands to know why Brutus turned against Caesar, this is my answer: Not because I cared for Caesar less, but because I cared for Rome more. Would you rather Caesar were living, and you all die slaves, than that Caesar were dead, and you all live as freemen? Because Caesar was my dear friend, I weep for him; because he was fortunate, I rejoice at his good fortune; because he was valiant, I honor him; but--because he was ambitious, I killed him. There are tears for his friendship; joy for his fortune; honor for his valor; and death for his ambition. Which of you is so low that you would prefer to be a slave? If any of you is, speak, for I have offended that person. Which of you is so uncivilized that you would prefer not to be a Roman? If any of you is, speak, for I have offended that person. I pause for a reply.

All.
None, Brutus, none!

Brutus
Then I have offended none. I have done no more to Caesar than you will do to Brutus. The reasons for his death are on record in the Capitol; we have not belittled his accomplishments or overemphasized the failings for offenses enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and others, with Caesar's body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony, who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth, as which of you shall not? With this I depart- that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All.

Live, Brutus, live, live!

First Citizen.

Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Second Citizen.

Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Citizen.

Let him be Caesar.

Fourth Citizen.

Caesar's better parts

Shall be crown'd in Brutus.

First Citizen.

We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamors.

Brutus.

My countrymen-

Second Citizen.

Peace! Silence! Brutus speaks.

First Citizen.

Peace, ho!

Brutus.

Good countrymen, let me depart alone,

And, for my sake, stay here with Antony.

Do grace to Caesar's corse, and grace his speech

Tending to Caesar's glories, which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart,

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke.

Exit.

First Citizen.

Stay, ho, and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Citizen.

Let him go up into the public chair;

We'll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Antony.

For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you.

Goes into the pulpit.

Fourth Citizen.

What does he say of Brutus?

Third Citizen.

He says, for Brutus' sake,

He finds himself beholding to us all.

Fourth Citizen.

'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Citizen.

This Caesar was a tyrant.

which he was killed.

[Enter Antony and others, with Caesar's body.]

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony, who, although he did not participate in Caesar's death, will receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth, just like all the rest of you. With this I leave, that, as I killed my best friend for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself when my country decides it needs my death.

All

Live, Brutus! live, live!

First Citizen

Bring him with triumph home to his house.

Second Citizen

Give him a statue with his ancestors.

Third Citizen

Let him be Caesar.

Fourth Citizen

The best qualities of Caesar

Will be crowned in Brutus.

First Citizen

We'll bring him to his house with shouts and noise.

Brutus

My countrymen--

Second Citizen

Peace! Silence! Brutus speaks.

First Citizen

Quiet down!

Brutus

Good countrymen, let me leave alone,

And, for my sake, stay here with Antony.

Give your respects to Caesar's corpse, and listen respectfully to the speech

About Caesar's accomplishments which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allowed to make.

I beg you, not one of you leave,

Except for me, until Antony has spoken.

[Exit.]

First Citizen

Stay here! and let us listen to Mark Antony.

Third Citizen

Let him go up into the speaker's platform.

We'll listen to him. Noble Antony, go up.

Antony

For Brutus' sake I am indebted to you.

[Goes into the pulpit.]

Fourth Citizen

What does he say about Brutus?

Third Citizen

He says that for Brutus' sake

He finds himself indebted to us all.

Fourth Citizen

He'd better not say anything bad about Brutus here!

First Citizen

Caesar was a tyrant.
Third Citizen.
Nay, that's certain.
We are blest that Rome is rid of him.
Second Citizen.
Peace! Let us hear what Antony can say.
Antony.
You gentle Romans-
All.
Peace, ho! Let us hear him.
Antony.
Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears!
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you Caesar was ambitious;
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest-
For Brutus is an honorable man;
So are they all, all honorable men-
Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me;
But Brutus says he was ambitious,
And Brutus is an honorable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill.
Did this in Caesar seem ambitious?
When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And surely he is an honorable man.
You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious,
And Brutus is an honorable man.
You all did so love him once, not without cause;
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
O judgement, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.
First Citizen.
Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.
Second Citizen.
If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Caesar has had great wrong.
Third Citizen.
Has he, masters?
I fear there will a worse come in his place.
Fourth Citizen.
Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

Third Citizen
No, that's for sure.
It's a good thing that Rome is rid of him.
Second Citizen
Quiet! Let us listen to what Antony says.
Antony
You gentle Romans--
All
Quiet! Let us hear him.
Antony
Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil things that men do live on after them;
The good things are often buried with their bones.
Let it be this way with Caesar. The noble Brutus
Has told you that Caesar was ambitious.
If that were true, it was a terrible fault,
And Caesar has paid for it terribly.
Here, with the permission of Brutus and the rest
(For Brutus is an honorable man;
So are they all, all honorable men),
I come to speak in Caesar's funeral.
He has brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms filled the government treasury.
Did this seem ambitious in Caesar?
Whenever the poor have cried, Caesar has wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honorable man.
You all saw that on the Lupercal
I offered him a kingly crown three times,
Which he refused three times. Was this ambition?
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And surely he is an honorable man.
I am speaking not to disprove what Brutus said,
But I am here to say what I do know.
You all loved him once, for good reasons.
What reason keeps you from mourning for him, then?
O judgment, you have run away to dumb animals,
And men have lost their intelligence! Bear with me,
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pause until it comes back to me.

First Citizen
It seems that what he says makes sense.
Second Citizen
If you think about this correctly, Caesar has been treated very badly.
Third Citizen
Has he, gentlemen?
I am afraid someone worse will come in his place.
Fourth Citizen
Did you notice what he said? He would not take the crown;
Therefore it is certain he was not ambitious.

First Citizen
If it be found so, some will dearly abide it.

Second Citizen
Poor soul! His eyes are red as fire with weeping.

Third Citizen
There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Citizen
Now pay attention. He's starting to speak.

Antony
Only yesterday the word of Caesar might
Have stood against the world. Now he lies there,
And no one will stoop so low as to pay him respect.
O gentlemen! If I wanted to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I would be doing Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honorable men.
I will not do them wrong. Instead, I choose
To wrong the dead to wrong myself and you,
Rather than wronging such honorable men.
But here's a document with Caesar's seal.
I found it in his closet; it's his will.
Just let the public hear this testament,
Which (pardon me) I do not mean to read,
And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds
And dip their handkerchiefs in his sacred blood;
Yes, beg a hair from him to remember him by,
And when they are dying, mention it in their wills,
Bequeathing it as a valuable inheritance
To their children.

Fourth Citizen
We'll hear the will! Read it, Mark Antony.

All
The will, the will! We will hear Caesar's will.

Antony
Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;
It is not meet you know how Caesar loved you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad.
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs,
For if you should, O, what would come of it!

Fourth Citizen
Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony.
You shall read us the will, Caesar's will.

Antony
Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?
I have o'er-shot myself to tell you of it.
I fear I wrong the honorable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Caesar; I do fear it.

Fourth Citizen
They were traitors. Honorable men!

All
The will! The testament!

Second Citizen
They were villains, murtherers. The will! Read the will!

Antony.
You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corse of Caesar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?

All.
Come down.

Second Citizen.
Descend.
He comes down from the pulpit

Third Citizen.
You shall have leave.

Fourth Citizen.
A ring, stand round.

First Citizen.
Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

Second Citizen.
Room for Antony, most noble Antony.

Antony.
Nay, press not so upon me, stand far off.

All.
Stand back; room, bear back!

Antony.
If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle. I remember
The first time ever Caesar put it on;
’Twas on a summer’s evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.
Look, in this place ran Cassius’ dagger through;
See what a rent the envious Casca made;
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
And as he pluck’d his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Caesar follow’d it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolved
If Brutus so unkindly knock’d, or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar’s angel.
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him!
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors’ arms,
Quite vanquish’d him. Then burst his mighty heart,
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey’s statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish’d over us.
O, now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pity. These are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what weep you when you but behold
Our Caesar’s vesture wounded? Look you here,
Here is himself, mar’t, as you see, with traitors.

They were villains, murderers! The will! Read the will!

Antony.
You will force me then to read the will?
Then make a circle around Caesar’s body
And let me show you the person who made the will.
Shall I come down? and will you give me permission?

All.
Come down.

Second Citizen.
Descend.

Third Citizen.
You have permission.
Antony comes down.

Fourth Citizen.
A circle! Stand round.

First Citizen.
Stand back from the hearse! Stand back from the body!

Second Citizen.
Make room for Antony, most noble Antony!

Antony.
No, do not crowd me so much. Stand far back.

All.
Stand back! Room! Move back!

Antony.
If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all recognize this toga. I remember
The first time Caesar ever put it on;
’Twas on a summer’s evening in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.
Look, in this place Cassius’ dagger ran through.
See what a hole the envious Casca made.
Through this one the well-beloved Brutus stabbed;
And as he pulled his cursed steel away,
Notice how the blood of Caesar followed it,
As if it was rushing outside to find out
If it was Brutus who so unkindly knocked or not;
Because Brutus, as you know, was Caesar’s angel.
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him!
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
Because when the noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, stronger than traitors’ arms,
Totally defeated him. Then his mighty heart burst;
And hiding his face in his toga,
Right at the bottom of Pompey’s statue
(Which ran blood the whole time) great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall that was, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
While bloody treason grew over us.
O, now you weep, and I can tell that you feel
The beginnings of pity. These are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what, do you weep when you look only
At our Caesar’s wounded clothing? Look at this!
Here is his body, damaged, as you see, with traitors.
Pulls the cloak off Caesar’s body.
First Citizen.
O piteous spectacle!
Second Citizen.
O noble Caesar!
Third Citizen.
O woeful day!
Fourth Citizen.
O traitors villains!
First Citizen.
O most bloody sight!
Second Citizen.
We will be revenged.

All.
Revenge! About! Seek! Burn! Fire! Kill!
Slay! Let not a traitor live!

Antony.
Stay, countrymen.
First Citizen.
Peace there! Hear the noble Antony.
Second Citizen.
We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Antony.
Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honorable.
What private griefs they have, alas, I know not,
That made them do it. They are wise and honorable,
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts.
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend, and that they know full well
That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood. I only speak right on;
I tell you that which you yourselves do know;
Show you sweet Caesar's wounds, poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me. But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

All.
We'll mutiny.
First Citizen.
We'll burn the house of Brutus.
Third Citizen.
Away, then! Come, seek the conspirators.
Antony.
Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

All.
Peace, ho! Hear Antony, most noble Antony!

First Citizen
O horrible sight!
Second Citizen
O noble Caesar!
Third Citizen
O sad day!
Fourth Citizen
O traitors, villains!
First Citizen
O most bloody sight!
Second Citizen
We will get revenge.

All.
Revenge! Look around! Seek! Burn! Fire! Kill!
Slay! Don't let a traitor live!

Antony.
Wait, countrymen.
First Citizen.
Quiet there! Listen to the noble Antony.
Second Citizen.
We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him!

Antony.
Good friends, sweet friends, don't let me stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
The men who have done this are honorable.
Alas, I don't know what private concerns they have
That made them do it. They are wise and honorable,
And no doubt will answer you with reasons.
I do not come, friends, to steal away your hearts.
I am no orator, like Brutus is,
But (as all of you know me) a plain blunt man
That loves my friend; and that is known very well by the men
Who publicly gave me permission to speak of him.
Because I don't have intelligence, or words, or worthiness,
Action, or voice, or the power of speech
To stir up men's emotions. I only speak right on.
I tell you what you yourselves know,
Show you sweet Caesar's wounds, poor poor speechless mouths,
And ask them to speak for me. But if I were Brutus,
And Brutus were Antony, then there would be an Antony
Who would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar that would persuade
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

All.
We'll mutiny.
First Citizen.
We'll burn the house of Brutus.
Third Citizen.
Let's go then! Come, look for the conspirators.
Antony.
Listen to me still, countrymen. Still listen to me speak.

All.
Be quiet! Hear Antony, most noble Antony!
Antony.
Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.
Wherein hath Caesar thus deserved your loves?
Alas, you know not; I must tell you then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.
All.
Most true, the will! Let's stay and hear the will.
Antony.
Here is the will, and under Caesar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
Second Citizen.
Most noble Caesar! We'll revenge his death.
Third Citizen.
O royal Caesar!
Antony.
Hear me with patience.
All.
Peace, ho!
Antony.
Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbors, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs forever--common pleasures,
To walk abroad and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Caesar! When comes such another?
First Citizen.
Never, never. Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.
Second Citizen.
Go fetch fire.
Third Citizen.
Pluck down benches.
Fourth Citizen.
Pluck down forms, windows, anything.
Exeunt Citizens with the body.
Anthony.
Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.
Enter a Servant.
How now, fellow?
Servant.
Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Anthony.
Where is he?
Servant.
He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house.
Anthony.
And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us anything.
Servant.
I heard him say Brutus and Cassius

Antony
Why, friends, you don't know what you are leaving to do.
How has Caesar deserved so much of your love?
Alas, you don't know! Then I have to tell you.
You have forgotten the will I told you about.
All
Most true! The will! Let's stay and hear the will.
Antony
Here is the will, under Caesar's seal.
He gives to every Roman citizen,
To each and every man, seventy-five drachmas.
Second Citizen
Most noble Caesar! We'll revenge his death!
Third Citizen
O royal Caesar!
Antony
Listen to me patiently.
All
Be quiet!
Antony
In addition, he has left you all his paths,
His private gardens, and newly-planted orchards,
On this side the Tiber; he has left them to you,
And to your heirs forever--common pleasures,
To walk outside and enjoy yourselves.
Here was a Caesar! When will another one come along?
First Citizen
Never, never! Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place
And with the burning pieces of wood burn the traitors' houses.
Pick up the body.
Second Citizen
Go get fire!
Third Citizen
Pull down the benches!
Fourth Citizen
Pull down the benches, windows, anything!
[Exit citizens with the body.]
Anthony
Now let it work. Mischief, you are loose,
Take whatever path you want.
[Enter a servant.]
What do you want, fellow?
Servant
Sir, Octavius has already arrived in Rome.
Anthony
Where is he?
Servant
He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house.
Anthony
I will go right there to see him.
He comes just as I had hoped. Fortune is favorable,
And in this mood will give us anything.
Servant
I heard him say that Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Antony.
Be like they had some notice of the people,
How I had moved them. Bring me to Octavius.

Exeunt.

Have ridden like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Antony
Probably they had some warning of the people,
The way I excited them. Take me to Octavius.

[Exit.]
SCENE III.
A street. Enter Cinna the poet.

Cinna.
I dreamt tonight that I did feast with Caesar,
And things unluckily charge my fantasy.
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.
First Citizen.
What is your name?
Second Citizen.
Whither are you going?
Third Citizen.
Where do you dwell?
Fourth Citizen.
Are you a married man or a bachelor?
Second Citizen.
Answer every man directly.
First Citizen.
Ay, and briefly.
Fourth Citizen.
Ay, and wisely.
Third Citizen.
Ay, and truly, you were best.
Cinna.
What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Second Citizen.
That's as much as to say they are fools that marry. You'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed directly.

Cinna.
Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.
First Citizen.
As a friend or an enemy?
Cinna.
As a friend.
Second Citizen.
That matter is answered directly.
Fourth Citizen.
For your dwelling, briefly.
Cinna.
Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
Third Citizen.
Your name, sir, truly.
Cinna.
Truly, my name is Cinna.
First Citizen.
Tear him to pieces, he's a conspirator.
Cinna.

Act III, Scene 3
[Enter Cinna, the poet, and after him the Citizens, armed with sticks, spears, and swords.]

Cinna.
I dreamt tonight that I feasted with Caesar,
And recent events have caused me to imagine awful things.
I have no desire to wander outside,
But something compels me to go out.

First Citizen.
What is your name?
Second Citizen.
Where are you going?
Third Citizen.
Where do you live?
Fourth Citizen.
Are you married or single?
Second Citizen.
Answer every man directly.
First Citizen.
Yes, and briefly.
Fourth Citizen.
Yes, and wisely.
Third Citizen.
Yes, and truthfully, you'd better.
Cinna.
What is my name? Where am I going? Where do I live? Am I married or single?
Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Second Citizen.
That's just like saying that only fools get married. You'll get a punch from me for that, I fear. Go on -- directly.

Cinna.
Directly I am going to Caesar's funeral.
First Citizen.
As a friend or an enemy?
Cinna.
As a friend.
Second Citizen.
You answered that question directly.
Fourth Citizen.
For where you live--briefly.
Cinna.
Briefly, I live by the Capitol.
Third Citizen.
Your name, sire, truthfully.
Cinna.
Truthfully, my name is Cinna.
First Citizen.
Tear him to pieces! He's a conspirator.
Cinna.

50
I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Citizen.
Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cinna.
I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Fourth Citizen.
It is no matter, his name's Cinna. Pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

Third Citizen.
Tear him, tear him!

Come, brands, ho, firebrands. To Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all.
Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's, some to Ligarius'. Away, go!

Exeunt.

---

I am Cinna the poet! I am Cinna the poet!

Fourth Citizen
Tear him for his bad poetry! Tear him for his bad poetry!

Cinna
I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Fourth Citizen
It doesn't matter; his name's Cinna!
Let's just tear the name out of his heart, and send him away.

Third Citizen
Tear him, tear him!

[They attack Cinna.]

Come, instigators! To Brutus' house, to Cassius' house! Burn all!
Some go to Decius' house and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'! Away, go!

[Exit all the citizens.]
ACT IV. SCENE I.
A house in Rome. Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, seated at a table.

Antony.
These many then shall die, their names are prick’d.

Octavius.
Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?

Lepidus.
I do consent-

Octavius.
Prick him down, Antony.

Lepidus.
Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister’s son, Mark Antony.

Antony.
He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him. But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar’s house, Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lepidus.
What, shall I find you here?

Octavius.
Or here, or at the Capitol. Exit Lepidus.

Antony.
This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands. Is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it?

Octavius.
So you thought him, And took his voice who should be prick’d to die In our black sentence and proscription.

Antony.
Octavius, I have seen more days than you, And though we lay these honors on this man To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down his load and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears And graze in commons.

Octavius.
You may do your will, But he’s a tried and valiant soldier.

Antony.
So is my horse, Octavius, and for that I do appoint him store of provender. It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow, one that feeds
On objects, arts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and staled by other men,
Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers; we must straight make head;
Therefore let our alliance be combined,
Our best friends made, our means stretch'd;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclosed,
And open perils surest answered.

Octavius.
Let us do so, for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischiefs.

Exeunt.
SCENE II.
Camp near Sardis. Before Brutus' tent. Drum. Enter
Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers; Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Brutus.
Stand, ho!

Lucilius.
Give the word, ho, and stand.

Brutus.
What now, Lucilius, is Cassius near?

Lucilius.
He is at hand, and Pindarus is come to do you salutation from his master.

Brutus.
He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus, in his own change, or by ill officers, hath given me some worthy cause to wish things undone; but if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pindarus.
I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear such as he is, full of regard and honor.

Brutus.
He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius, how he received you. Let me be resolved.

Lucilius.
With courtesy and with respect enough,
but not with such familiar instances,
nor with such free and friendly conference,
as he hath used of old.

Brutus.
Thou hast described
a hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius, when love begins to sicken and decay
it useth an enforced ceremony.
there are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
but hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
make gallant show and promise of their mettle;

But when they should endure the bloody spur,
they fall their crests and like deceitful jades sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucilius.
They meant his night in Sard is to be quarter'd;
the greater part, the horse in general,
are come with Cassius.

Low march within.

Brutus.
Hark, he is arrived.
March gently on to meet him.
Enter Cassius and his Powers.

Cassius.
Stand, ho!

Brutus.
Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

First Soldier.
Stand!

Second Soldier.
Stand!

Third Soldier.
Stand!

Cassius.
Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Brutus.
Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cassius.
Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs,
And when you do them-

Brutus.
Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle. Bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cassius.
Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Brutus.
Lucilius, do you the like, and let no man
Come to our tent till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

Exeunt.

Stand ho!

Brutus
Stand ho! Pass it down.

First Soldier
Stand!

Second Soldier
Stand!

Third Soldier
Stand!

Cassius
Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Brutus
Judge me, you gods! Would I do wrong to my enemies?
And if I would not do that, how could I wrong a brother?

Cassius
Brutus, this serious manner of yours hides wrongs,
And when you do them --

Brutus
Cassius, be calm,
Speak about your complaints quietly; I do know you well.
In plain sight of both our armies here
(Which should see nothing but love from us)
Let us not argue. Ask them to move back;
Then in my tent, Cassius, explain your complaints,
And I will listen to you.

Cassius
Pindarus,
Ask our commanders to lead their soldiers back
A little from this spot.

Brutus
Lucius, you do the same, and let no one
Come to our tent until we have had our meeting.
Let Lucilius and Titinius guard our door.

[Exit Brutus and Cassius withdraw into Brutus' tent, while Lucilius and Titinius mount guard outside.]
SCENE III.
Brutus’ tent. Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cassius.
That you have wrong’d me doth appear in this: You have condemn’d and noted Lucius Pella For taking bribes here of the Sardians, Wherein my letters, praying on his side, Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Brutus.
You wrong’d yourself to write in such a case.

Cassius.
In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offense should bear his comment.

Brutus.
Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself Are much condemn’d to have an itching palm, To sell and mart your offices for gold To undeservers.

Cassius.
I an itching palm? You know that you are Brutus that speaks this, Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Brutus.
The name of Cassius honors this corruption, And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cassius.
Chastisement?

Brutus.
Remember March, the ides of March remember. Did not great Julius bleed for justice’ sake? What villain touched his body, that did stab, And not for justice? What, shall one of us, That struck the foremost man of all this world But for supporting robbers, shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes And sell the mighty space of our large honors For so much trash as may be grasped thus? I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon, Than such a Roman.

Cassius.
Brutus, bait not me, I’ll not endure it. You forget yourself To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I, Older in practice, abler than yourself To make conditions.

Brutus.
Go to, you are not, Cassius.

Cassius.
I am.

Brutus.
I say you are not.

Act IV, Scene 3

Cassius
Here is the evidence that you have done something wrong to me: You have condemned and disgraced Lucius Pella For taking bribes from the Sardians here; But the letter I sent, arguing his side, Because I knew him, was ignored.

Brutus
You did something wrong to yourself by writing in circumstances like that.

Cassius
At a time like this it is not appropriate For every trivial offense to be looked at closely.

Brutus
Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself Are severely criticized for having an itching palm, Selling and marketing your positions for money To people who don’t deserve the position.

Cassius
Me, an itching palm? You know that you are Brutus saying this, Because if you were anyone else I swear by the gods that this speech would be your last.

Brutus
The name Cassius makes this corruption seem honorable, And as a result punishment hides his head.

Cassius
Punishment?

Brutus
Remember March, remember the Ides of March: Didn’t great Julius bleed for the sake of justice? What villain touched his body, who stabbed him For a reason other than justice? What? should one of us, Who struck the most powerful man in the whole world Only because he supported robbers, should we now Contaminate our fingers with dishonorable bribes? And sell the vastness of our good reputations For just the amount of trash that can be gained this way? I would rather be a dog, and howl at the moon, Than be a Roman like that.

Cassius
Brutus, do not provoke me, I will not put up with it. You forget who you are When you try to put restrictions on me. I am a soldier, I, More experienced, better able than you To make decisions about how things should be managed.

Brutus
Give it up; you are not, Cassius.

Cassius
I am.

Brutus
I say that you are not.
Cassius.
Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no farther.

Brutus.
Away, slight man!

Cassius.
Is't possible?

Brutus.
Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted when a madman stares?

Cassius.
O gods, ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Brutus.
All this? Ay, more. Fret till your proud heart break.
Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I bouge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humor? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you, for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cassius.
Is it come to this?

Brutus.
You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so, make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cassius.
You wrong me every way, you wrong me, Brutus.
I said, an elder soldier, not a better.
Did I say "better"?

Brutus.
If you did, I care not.

Cassius.
When Caesar lived, he durst not thus have moved me.

Brutus.
Peace, peace! You durst not so have tempted him.

Cassius.
I durst not?

Brutus.
No.

Cassius.
What, durst not tempt him?

Brutus.
For your life you durst not.

Cassius.
Do not presume too much upon my love;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Brutus.
Don't push me, or I shall forget myself;
Think about your health; don't provoke me anymore.

Brutus.
Get away, little man!

Cassius.
Is it possible?

Brutus.
Listen to me, for I have something to say.
Must I give leeway to your sudden anger?
Should I be frightened when a madman glares?

Cassius.
O you gods, you gods, must I put up with all this?

Brutus.
All this? yes, more. Rant and rave until your proud heart breaks;
Go show your slaves how temperamental you are,
And make your servants tremble. Do I have to budge?
Do I have to defer to you? Do I have to stand and duck
Under your testy moods? By the gods,
You will swallow the poison of your bad temper
Even if it makes you split; because, from now on,
I will make you a joke, yes, a subject of laughter,
When you are irritable.

Cassius.
Has it come to this?

Brutus.
You say that you are a better soldier than I am:
Let it appear to be true; make your boasting true,
And that would make me happy. For my part,
I will be glad to learn of noble men.

Cassius.
You do me wrong in every way: you do me wrong.

Brutus.
I said an older soldier, not a better one.
Did I say "better"?

Brutus.
If you did, I don't care.

Cassius.
When Caesar lived, he did not dare to make me angry like this.

Brutus.
Be calm, be calm, you did not dare to have tempted him like this.

Cassius.
I did not dare?

Brutus.
No.

Cassius.
What? Dare not tempt him?

Brutus.
For fear of your life you did not dare.

Cassius.
Do not presume too much on my good will,
I may do something that I will be sorry for.
You have done something you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am so strongly protected by honesty
That they pass by me like a gentle breeze,
Which I do not notice. I sent a message to you asking
For certain amounts of gold, which you denied me;
For I cannot raise any money through evil means.
By heaven, I would rather make coins out of my heart
And give my blood for money than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their pittance
Through dishonest means. I sent
To you for gold to pay my soldiers,
Which you denied me. Was that done like Cassius?
When Marcus Brutus becomes so covetous
That he locks such worthless disks away from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!
Cassius.
I did not deny you.
Brutus.
You did.
Cassius.
I did not. He was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath rived my heart.
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.
Brutus.
I do not, till you practise them on me.
Cassius.
You love me not.
Brutus.
I do not like your faults.
Cassius.
A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Brutus.
A flatterer's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.
Cassius.
Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world;
Hated by one he loves; braved by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observed,
Set in a notebook, learned and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes! There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Pluto's mine, richer than gold.
If thou best a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart.
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar, for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better
You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me,
For I can raise no money by vile means.
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart
And drop my blood for drachmas than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their fleabite
By any indirection. I sent
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me. Was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!
Cassius.
I did not deny you.
Brutus.
You did.
Cassius.
I did not. The man was a fool who brought
My answer back. Brutus has broken my heart.
A friend should tolerate his friend's weaknesses;
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.
Brutus.
I do not, until you inflict them on me.
Cassius.
You do not love me.
Brutus.
I do not like your faults.
Cassius.
A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Brutus.
A flatterer's eye would not see them, even though they appear
As huge as high Olympus.
Cassius.
Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world;
Hated by one he loves; braved by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observed,
Set in a notebook, learned and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes! There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Pluto's mine, richer than gold.
If thou best a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart.
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar, for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better
Than ever thou lovedst Cassius.

Brutus.
Sheathe your dagger.
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonor shall be humor.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb,
That carries anger as the flint bears fire,
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark
And straight is cold again.

Cassius.
Hath Cassius lived
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?

Brutus.
When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cassius.
Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Brutus.
And my heart too.

Cassius.
O Brutus!

Brutus.
What's the matter?

Cassius.
Have not you love enough to bear with me
When that rash humor which my mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?

Brutus.
Yes, Cassius, and from henceforth,
When you are overearnest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

Poet.
[Within.] Let me go in to see the generals.
There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet
They be alone.

Lucilius.
[Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet.
[Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius, Titinius, and Lucius.

Cassius.
How now, what's the matter?

Poet.
For shame, you generals! What do you mean?
Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

Cassius.
Ha, ha! How vilely doth this cynic rhyme!

Brutus.
Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence!
Cassius.
Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Brutus.
I'll know his humor when he knows his time.
What should the wars do with these jigging fools?
Companion, hence!

Cassius.
Away, away, be gone!
Exit Poet.

Brutus.
Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies tonight.

Cassius.
And come yourselves and bring Messala with you
Immediately to us.
Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.

Brutus.
Lucius, a bowl of wine!
Exit Lucius.

Cassius.
I did not think you could have been so angry.

Brutus.
O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cassius.
Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Brutus.
No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead.

Cassius.
Ha? Portia?

Brutus.
She is dead.

Cassius.
How 'scaped killing when I cross'd you so?
O insupportable and touching loss!
Upon what sickness?

Brutus.
Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong--for with her death
That tidings came--with this she fell distract,
And (her attendants absent) swallow'd fire.

Cassius.
And died so?

Brutus.
Even so.

Cassius.
O ye immortal gods!
Re-enter Lucius, with wine and taper.

Brutus.
Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

Drinks.
Cassius.
My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o’erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus’ love.

Drinks.

Brutus.
Come in, Titinius!

Exit Lucius. Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.
Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cassius.
Portia, art thou gone?

Brutus.
No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Messala.
Myself have letters of the selfsame tenure.

Brutus.
With what addition?

Messala.
That by proscription and bills of outlawry
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Brutus.
There in our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cassius.
Cicero one!

Messala.
Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Brutus.
No, Messala.

Messala.
Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Brutus.
Nothing, Messala.

Messala.
That, methinks, is strange.

Brutus.
Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?

Messala.
No, my lord.

Brutus.
Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Cassius.
Portia, are you gone?

Brutus.
No more, I ask you.
Messala, I have received letters
Saying that young Octavius and Mark Antony
Are coming down on us with a mighty army,
Turning their path quickly toward Philippi.

Messala.
I also have letters that say basically the same thing.

Brutus.
With what additional information?

Messala.
That with lists of the condemned and sentences of criminal status
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus
Have killed one hundred senators.

Brutus.
In that area our letters do not agree;
Mine mention seventy senators that died
With their lists of the condemned, one of them being Cicero.

Cassius.
Cicero was one?

Messala.
Cicero is dead,
And it’s because of that list of the condemned.
Did you receive your letters from your wife, my lord?

Brutus.
No, Messala.

Messala.
And none of your letters wrote about her?

Brutus.
None, Messala.

Messala.
That, I think, is strange.

Brutus.
Why do you ask? Have you heard anything about her in yours?

Messala.
No, my lord.

Brutus.
Now because you are a Roman tell me the truth.
Messala.
Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Brutus.
Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala.
With meditating that she must die once
I have the patience to endure it now.

Messala.
Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cassius.
I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Brutus.
Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cassius.
I do not think it good.

Brutus.
Your reason?

Cassius.
This it is:
'Tis better that the enemy seek us;
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offense, whilst we lying still
Are full of rest, defense, and nimbleness.

Brutus.
Good reasons must of force give place to better.
The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forced affection,
For they have grudged us contribution.
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encouraged;
From which advantage shall we cut him off
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cassius.
Hear me, good brother.

Brutus.
Under your pardon. You must note beside
That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which taken at the flood leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cassius.

Messala
Then like a Roman take the truth I tell:
For it is certain that she is dead, and she died in a strange way.

Brutus
Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala.
Because I've thought about the fact that she would die someday,
I have the strength to endure her death now.

Messala
That is how great men should handle great losses.

Cassius
I have as much of this in theory as you,
But still my nature could not take it so well.

Brutus
Well, back to our current work. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi immediately?

Cassius
I do not think it's a good idea.

Brutus
Your reason?

Cassius
It is this:
It is better that the enemy look for us;
That way he will waste his supplies, wear out his soldiers,
Harming himself, while we, staying put,
Are full of rest, defense, and nimbleness.

Brutus
Good reasons must necessarily give way to better ones:
The people between Philippi and this place
Have only a forced friendliness,
Because they have been unwilling to contribute to us.
The enemy, marching past them,
Will add reinforcements with them,
And come at us refreshed, newly reinforced, and encouraged;
We will cut him off from this advantage
If we face him at Philippi,
With these people behind us.

Cassius
Listen to me, good friend.

Brutus
Please forgive me. You must also notice
That we have used up all of our favors from friends,
Our armies are full, our cause is ready:
The enemy grows every day;
We, at the top, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the business of men,
Which if it's jumped into at the high point, leads on to success;
If it is missed, the whole journey of their life
Is stuck in shallows and in unhappiness.
We are now floating on a high tide like that,
And we must take the current when it is ready,
Or lose our investments.

Cassius
Then, with your will, go on;
We'll along ourselves and meet them at Philippi.

Brutus.
The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cassius.
No more. Good night.
Early tomorrow will we rise and hence.

Brutus.
Lucius!

Re-enter Lucius.
My gown.

Exit Lucius.
Farewell, good Messala;
Good night, Titinius; noble, noble Cassius,
Good night and good repose.

Cassius.
O my dear brother!
This was an ill beginning of the night.
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Brutus.
Everything is well.

Cassius.
Good night, my lord.

Brutus.
Good night, good brother.

Titinius, Messala.
Good night, Lord Brutus.

Brutus.
Farewell, everyone.

Exeunt all but Brutus. Re-enter Lucius, with the gown.
Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Lucius.
Here in the tent.

Brutus.
What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not, thou art o'erwatch'd.
Call Claudio and some other of my men,
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Lucius.
Varro and Claudio!

Enter Varro and Claudio.

Varro.
Calls my lord?

Brutus.
I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep;
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Varro.
Then as you wish go ahead;
We'll go along also, and meet them at Philippi.

Brutus.
The middle of the night has crept up while we were talking,
And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will satisfy with a little rest.
There is nothing else to say?

Cassius.
Nothing else. Good night. Early tomorrow we will get up, and leave.

Brutus.
Lucius!

Enter Lucius.
My gown.

Exit Lucius.
Farewell, good Messala.
Goodnight, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,
Goodnight, and pleasant sleep.

Cassius.
Oh my dear brother!
Tonight had a bad beginning.
Never again let us be divided like that!
Let us not, Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the gown.

Brutus.
Everything is fine now.

Cassius.
Goodnight, my lord.

Brutus.
Goodnight, good brother.

Titinius, Messala.
Goodnight, Lord Brutus.

Brutus.
Farewell each of you.

Exit all but Brutus and Lucius.
Give me the gown. Where is your musical instrument?

Lucius.
Here in the tent.

Brutus.
What, you sound sleepy?
Poor boy. I don't blame you, you've been kept up too long.
Call Claudio and another one of my men,
I'll have them sleep here on cushions in my tent.

Lucius.
Varrus and Claudio!

Enter Varrus and Claudio.

Varrus.
Does my lord call us?

Brutus.
I ask you, gentlemen, lie in my tent and sleep.
I may wake you after awhile
To send you on an errand to my brother Cassius.
So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.

Brutus.
I would not have it so. Lie down, good sirs.
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.
Look Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.
Varro and Claudio lie down.

Lucius.
I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Brutus.
Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Lucius.
Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Brutus.
It does, my boy.
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Lucius.
It is my duty, sir.

Brutus.
I should not urge thy duty past thy might;
I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Lucius.
I have slept, my lord, already.

Brutus.
It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long. If I do live,
I will be good to thee.

_Music, and a song._
This is a sleepy tune. Oh murderous slumber,
Layest thou thy leaden mace upon my boy
That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good night.
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.
Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd down
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

_Sits down. Enter the Ghost of Caesar._
How ill this taper burns! Ha, who comes here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me. Art thou anything?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil
That makest my blood cold and my hair to stare?
Speak to me what thou art

Ghost.
Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Brutus.
Why comest thou?

Ghost.
If you want us to, we will stand and wait until you need us.

Brutus.
I will not permit that. Lie down, good gentlemen,
I might change my mind.

[Varius and Claudio lie down.]
Look, Lucius, here's the book I looked so hard for;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

Lucius.
I was sure that you did not give it to me, your lordship.

Brutus.
Bear with me, good boy, I am very forgetful.
Can you keep your sleepy eyes open for awhile,
And play a strain or two on your musical instrument?

Lucius.
Yes, my lord, if you would like that.

Brutus.
I would, my boy.
I bother you too much, but you are willing.

Lucius.
It is my duty, sir.

Brutus.
I should not force you out of duty to do more than you have strength for;
I know young people need a time of rest.

Lucius.
I have already slept, my lord.

Brutus.
It is good that you did, and you will sleep again;
I won't keep you long. If I live,
I will be good to you.

_Music, and a song._
This is a sleepy tune. Oh murderous sleep!
Do you use your heavy rod on my boy,
Who plays you music? Good boy, good night;
I will not go so far as to wake you.
If you nod, you'll break your musical instrument.
I'll take it from you; and, good boy, good night.
Let me see, let me see; isn't the page folded?
Where I stopped reading? Here it is, I think.

_Enter the Ghost of Caesar._
How poorly this candle burns! Ha! Who is it?
I think it is the weakness of my eyes
That creates this terrible apparition.
It is coming up to me. Are you any thing?
Are you a god, an angel, or a devil,
You who makes my blood cold, and my hair stand on end?
Tell me what you are.

Ghost.
Your evil spirit, Brutus.

Brutus.
Why have you come?

Ghost.
To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Brutus.
Well, then I shall see thee again?

Ghost.
Ay, at Philippi.

Brutus.
Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.

Exit Ghost.

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest.
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy! Lucius! Varro! Claudio! Sirs, awake!
Claudio!

Lucius.
The strings, my lord, are false.

Brutus.
He thinks he still is at his instrument.
Lucius, awake!

Lucius.
My lord?

Brutus.
Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Lucius.
My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Brutus.
Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see anything?

Lucius.
Nothing, my lord.

Brutus.
Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah Claudio!
[To Varro.] Fellow thou, awake!

Varro.
My lord?

Claudio.
My lord?

Brutus.
Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Varro.
Claudio.
Did we, my lord?

Brutus.
Ay, saw you anything?

Varro.
No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Claudio.
Nor I, my lord.

Brutus.
Go and commend me to my brother Cassius;
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Varro.
Claudio.
It shall be done, my lord.

Exit.

To tell you that you will see me at Philippi.

Brutus.
Well; then I will see you again?

Ghost.
Yes, at Philippi.

Brutus.
Then I will see you at Philippi.

Exit Ghost.

Now that I have found my courage you disappear.
Evil spirit, I want to have more conversation with you.
Boy, Lucius! Varrus! Claudio! Gentlemen, wake up!
Claudio!

Lucius.
The strings are out of tune, my lord.

Brutus.
He thinks he is still playing his musical instrument.
Lucius, wake up!

Lucius.
My lord?

Brutus.
Lucius, did you have a dream that made you shout like that?

Lucius.
My lord, I didn't know that I shouted.

Brutus.
Yes, you certainly did. Did you see anything?

Lucius.
Nothing, my lord.

Brutus.
Go back to sleep, Lucius. Mister Claudio!
[To Varrus.] You man, wake up!

Varrus.
My lord?

Claudio.
My lord?

Brutus.
Gentlemen, why did you shout in your sleep?

Both.
Did we, my lord?

Brutus.
Yes. Did you see anything?

Varrus.
No, my lord. I did not see anything.

Claudio.
Neither did I, my lord.

Brutus.
Go and bring a message from me to my brother Cassius;
Ask him to set out with his troops before I do,
And we will follow.

Both.
It will be done, my lord.

[Exit.]
ACT V. SCENE I.
The plains of Philippi. Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Octavius.
Now, Antony, our hopes are answered.
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions.
It proves not so. Their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Antony.
Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it. They could be content
To visit other places, and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.
Prepare you, generals.
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Antony.
Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Octavius.
Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Antony.
Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Octavius.
I do not cross you, but I will do so.

March. Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and others.

Brutus.
They stand, and would have parley.

Cassius.
Stand fast, Titinius; we must out and talk.

Octavius.
Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Antony.
No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.
Make forth, the generals would have some words.

Octavius.
Stir not until the signal not until the signal.

Brutus.
Words before blows. Is it so, countrymen?

Octavius.
Not that we love words better, as you do.

Brutus.
Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Antony.
In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words.
Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying "Long live! Hail, Caesar!"

Cassius.
Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Antony.
Not stingless too.

Brutus.
O, yes, and soundless too,
For you have stolen their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threaten before you sting.

Antony.
Villains! You did not so when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar.
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar’s feet;
 Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind
Strooke Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers!

Cassius.
Flatterers? Now, Brutus, thank yourself.
This tongue had not offended so today,
If Cassius might have ruled.

Octavius.
Come, come, the cause. If arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look,
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds
Be well avenged, or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Brutus.
Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
Unless thou bring' st them with thee.

Octavius.
So I hope,
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Brutus.
O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honorable.

Cassius.
A peevish school boy, worthless of such honor,
Join'd with a masker and a reveler!

Antony.
Old Cassius still!

Octavius.
Come, Antony, away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.
If you dare fight today, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

Cassius.

Octavius.
That's what I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Brutus.
Oh, even if you were the most noble of your family,
Young man, you could not die more honorably.

Cassius.
A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honor,
Partnered with a faker and a party-goer!

Antony.
Same old Cassius still!

Octavius.
Come, Antony; away!
We throw defiance in your face, traitors.
If you dare to fight today, come to the battlefield;
If not, then come when you have the stomach for it.

Cassius.
Why, now, blow and, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Brutus.
Ho, Lucilius! Hark, a word with you.

Lucilius.
[Stands forth.] My lord?
Brutus and Lucilius converse apart.

Cassius.
Messala!

Messala.
[Stands forth.] What says my general?

Cassius.
Messala,
This is my birthday, as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala.
Be thou my witness that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion. Now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,
Who to Philippi here consorted us.
This morning are they fled away and gone,
And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites
Fly o'er our heads and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey. Their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Messala.
Believe not so.

Cassius.
I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit and resolved
To meet all perils very constantly.

Brutus.
Even so, Lucilius.

Cassius.
Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods today stand friendly that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together.
What are you then determined to do?

Brutus.
Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself- I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,

Well now, let the wind blow, the waves swell, and the ship sail!
The storm is here, and everything is at stake.

Brutus.
Ho, Lucilius, listen, a word with you.

[Lucilius and then Messala step forward.]

Lucilius.
My lord.

[Brutus and Lucilius talk separately.]

Cassius.
Messala!

Messala.
What does my general say?

Cassius.
Messala,
This is my birthday; on this very day
Cassius was born. Give me your hand, Messala.
Be my witness that against my will
(like Pompey was) I am compelled to risk
All our liberties on one battle.
You know that I believed strongly in Epicurus,
And in his opinions; now I change my mind,
And give some credit to things that foretell.
Coming from Sardis, on our banner out front
Two mighty eagles swooped down, and there they perched,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,
Accompanying us here to Philippi.
This morning they have fled away and are gone,
And in their place ravens, crows, and kites
Fly over our heads, and look down on us
As if we were sickly prey. Their shadows seem
A deadly canopy, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Messala.
Don't believe that.

Cassius.
I only partly believe it,
Because I am fresh of spirit, and resolved
To meet all our perils very steadfastly.

Brutus.
Just like that, Lucilius.

Cassius.
Now, most noble Brutus,
May the gods today be friendly, so we may,
Friends in peace, live on to old age!
But since the business of men is still uncertain,
Let's consider the worst that may happen.
If we do lose this battle, then this is
The very last time we shall speak together:
What have you decided to do if that happens?

Brutus.
Even by the rules of that philosophy
Which I used to blame Cato for the death
He gave himself--I don't know how,
But I do think it is cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life—arming myself with patience
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.

Cassius.
Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

Brutus.
No, Cassius, no. Think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take.
Forever, and forever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cassius.
Forever and forever farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

Brutus.
Why then, lead on. O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! Away!

Exeunt.
SCENE II.
The field of battle. Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Brutus.
Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side.

Loud alarum.
Let them set on at once, for I perceive
But cold demeanor in Octavia’s wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.

Ride, ride, Messala. Let them all come down.

Exeunt.

Act V, Scene 2
[Call to arms sounds. Enter Brutus and Messala.]

Brutus
Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these written orders
To the forces on the other side.

[Loud call to arms.]
Let them attack at once; because I see
A lack of enthusiasm in Octavio’s wing,
And a sudden push will overthrow them.

Ride, ride, Messala, let them all come down.

[Exit.]
SCENE III.
Another part of the field. Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cassius.
O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn’d enemy,
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Titinius.
O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early,
Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly. His soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter Pindarus.

Pindarus.
Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord;
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cassius.
This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius:
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Titinius.
They are, my lord.

Cassius.
Titinius, if thou lovest me,
Mount thou my horse and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
And here again, that I may rest assured
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Titinius.
I will be here again, even with a thought.

Cassius.
Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou notest about the field.

Pindarus ascends the hill.

This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pindarus.
[Above.] O my lord!

Cassius.
What news?

Pindarus.
[Above.] Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him.
Now, Titinius! Now some light. O, he lights too.
He's ta'en [Shout.] And, hark! They shout for joy.

Cassius.
Come down; behold no more.

Act V, Scene 3
[Call to arms sounds. Enter Cassius and Titinius.]

Cassius
Oh, look, Titinius, look, the villains run!
My own people have become their own enemy.
This standard-bearer of mine was turning back;
I killed the coward, and took the flag from him.

Titinius
Oh Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early,
And, with an advantage over Octavius,
Took it too eagerly. His soldiers started looting,
While we are surrounded by Antony.

[Enter Pindarus.]

Pindarus
Run further away, my lord, run further away;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord;
Therefore run, noble Cassius, run far away.

Cassius
This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius,
Are those my tents where I see the fire?

Titinius
They are, my lord.

Cassius
Titinius, if you are my friend,
Mount your horse, and hide your spurs in him
Until he has brought you up to those troops
And back here again, so that I may rest assured
Whether those troops are friend or foe.

Titinius
I will be back here again, as quickly as a thought.

Cassius
Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was always dim; watch Titinius,
And tell me what you see on the field.

Pindarus goes up.]

This is the day I first breathed: time has come round,
And where I began, there I shall end;
My life has run his course. Sirrah, what news?

Pindarus
[above] Oh my lord!

Cassius
What news?

Pindarus
Titinius is surrounded
With horsemen, that ride quickly toward him,
But he races on. Now they are almost up to him.
Now, Titinius! Now some dismount. Oh, he dismounts too.
He's captured. [Shout.] And listen, they shout for joy.

Cassius
Come down, look no more.
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Pindarus descends.

Come hither, sirrah.
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner,
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath;
Now be a freeman, and with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hilts;
And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. [Pindarus stabs him.] Caesar,
 thou art revenged,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee.

Dies.

Pindarus.
So, I am free, yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. Exit.

Re-enter Titinius with Messala.

Messala.
It is but change, Titinius, for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Titinius.
These tidings would well comfort Cassius.

Messala.
Where did you leave him?

Titinius.
All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Messala.
Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Titinius.
He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Messala.
Is not that he?

Titinius.
No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting sun,
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set,
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Messala.
Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.
O hateful error, melancholy's child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceived,
Thou never comest unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee!

Titinius.
What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?

Oh, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend captured in front of my face!

[Pindarus descends.]

Come here, sir.
In Parthia I took you prisoner,
And then I made you promise, to save your life,
That whatever I asked you to do,
You would try to do it. Come now, keep your promise;
Now be a freeman, and with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, pierce this heart.
Don't wait to answer; here, take the hilts,
And when my face is covered, as it is now,
Guide the sword. [Pindarus stabs him.] Caesar, you have your revenge,
Even with the sword that killed you.

Pindarus.
So, I am free; but I would not have been,
If I had dared to do what I wanted. Oh Cassius,
Pindarus will run far from this country,
Where a Roman will never notice him. Exit.

[Enter Titinius and Messala.]

Messala.
It is only an exchange, Titinius; for Octavius
Has been defeated by noble Brutus' army,
Just as Cassius' legions have been by Antony.

Titinius.
This news will comfort Cassius.

Messala.
Where did you leave him?

Titinius.
All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his slave, on this hill.

Messala.
Isn't that he lying on the ground?

Titinius.
He does not lie like the living. Oh my heart!

Messala.
Is that not he?

Titinius.
No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. Oh setting sun,
Just as you sink tonight in your red rays,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set!
The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of the success of my mission has done this deed.

Messala.
Mistrust of good success has done this deed.
Oh hateful error, melancholy's child,
Why do you show to the willing thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, quickly conceived,
You never had a fortunate birth,
But killed the mother that gave birth to you!

Titinius.
What, Pindarus? Where are you, Pindarus?
Messala.
Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears. I may say “thrusting” it,
For piercing steel and darts envenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.

Titinius.
Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while.

Exit Messala.
Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? And did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstrued everything!
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
By your leave, gods, this is a Roman’s part.
Come, Cassius’ sword, and find Titinius’ heart.

Kills himself.

Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Cato, and others.

Brutus.
Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Messala.
Lo, yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Brutus.
Titinius’ face is upward.

Cato.
He is slain.

Brutus.
O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails.

Low alarums.

Cato.
Brave Titinius!
Look whe’er he have not crown’d dead Cassius!

Brutus.
Are yet two Romans living such as these?
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe moe tears
To this dead man than you shall see me pay.
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.
Come therefore, and to Thasos send his body;
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come,
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.
Labio and Flavio, set our battles on.
’Tis three o’clock, and Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight.

Messala
Look for him, Titinius, while I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears; I may say “thrusting” it;
For piercing steel, and poisoned darts,
Will be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As news of this sight.

Titinius
Hurry, Messala,
And I will look for Pindarus in the meantime.

Exit Messala.
Why did you send me out, brave Cassius?
Didn’t I meet your friends? and didn’t they Put on my head this wreath of victory,
And ask me to give it to you? Didn’t you hear their shouts?
Alas, you have misconstrued everything.
But wait, take this garland on your head;
Your Brutus asked me to give it to you, and I
Will do what he asks. Brutus, come quickly,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
With your permission, gods!–this is a Roman’s part.
Come, Cassius’ sword, and find Titinius’ heart.

Dies.

[Call to arms sounds. Enter Brutus, Messala, young Cato,
Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.]

Brutus
Where, where, Messala, does his body lie?

Messala
See over there, and Titinius mourning it.

Brutus
Titinius’ face is upward.

Cato
He is dead.

Brutus
Oh Julius Caesar, you are mighty still!
Your spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In on our own selves.

[Low calls to arms.]

Cato
Brave Titinius!
See how he has crowned dead Cassius!

Brutus
Are there still two living Romans like these two?
The last of all the Romans, farewell!
It is impossible that Rome will ever
Bring up anyone like you. Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man than you will see me pay.
I will find time, Cassius; I will find time.
Come then, and send his body to Thasos;
His funerals will not be held in our camp,
In case it would unsettle us. Lucilius, come,
And come, young Cato, let us go to the field,
Labio and Flavio wage our battles on.
It’s three o’clock, and, Romans, still before night
We shall tempt fate in a second fight.
Exeunt.

[Exit.]
SCENE IV.
Another part of the field. Alarum. Enter, fighting,
Soldiers of both armies; then Brutus, young Cato,
Lucilius, and others.

Brutus.
Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato.
What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field.
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend.
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Brutus.
And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus!
Exit.

Lucilius.
O young and noble Cato, art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And mayst be honor'd, being Cato's son.

First Soldier.
Yield, or thou diest.

Lucilius.
Only I yield to die.
[Offers money.] There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight:
Kill Brutus, and be honor'd in his death.
First Soldier.
We must not. A noble prisoner!

Enter Antony.
Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Antony.
Where is he?

Lucilius.
Safe, Antony, Brutus is safe enough.
I dare assure thee that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus;
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Antony.
This is not Brutus, friend, but, I assure you,
A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,
Give him all kindness; I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,
And see wheer Brutus be alive or dead,
And bring us word unto Octavius' tent
How everything is chanced.

Exeunt.

And bring for us a message to Octavius' tent
Telling how everything turned out.
SCENE V.
Another part of the field. Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Brutus.
Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Clitus.
Statilius show’d the torchlight, but, my lord, He came not back. He is or ta’en or slain.

Brutus.
Sit thee down, Clitus. Slaying is the word: It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

Whispers.

Clitus.
What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Brutus.
Peace then, no words.

Clitus.
I’ll rather kill myself.

Brutus.
Hark thee, Dardanius.

Whispers.

Dardanius.
Shall I do such a deed?

Clitus.
O Dardanius!

Dardanius.
O Clitus!

Clitus.
What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dardanius.
To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Clitus.
Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Brutus.
Come hither, good Volumnius, list a word.

Volumnius.
What says my lord?

Brutus.
Why, this, Volumnius:
The ghost of Caesar hath appear’d to me Two several times by night; at Sardis once, And this last night here in Philippi fields. I know my hour is come.

Volumnius.
Not so, my lord.

Brutus.
Nay I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; Our enemies have beat us to the pit; Low alarums. It is more worthy to leap in ourselves Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, Thou know’st that we two went to school together;

Act V, Scene 5
[Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.]

Brutus
Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Clitus
Statilius signalled with the torchlight, but, my lord, He did not come back. He is captured or killed.

Brutus
Sit down, Clitus; killing is the word, It is an action when it is practiced. Listen, Clitus. [Whispering.]

Clitus
What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Brutus
Quiet then, no words.

Clitus
I'd rather kill myself.

Brutus
Listen, Dardanius.

[Whispering.]

Dardanius
Should I do such a thing?

Clitus
Oh Dardanius!

Dardanius
Oh Clitus!

Clitus
What harmful request did Brutus make to you?

Dardanius
To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Clitus
Now that noble vessel is full of grief, So that it runs over even at his eyes.

Brutus
Come here, good Volumnius; listen to a word.

Volumnius
What says my lord?

Brutus
Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Caesar has appeared to me Two different times at night, here in the Philippi fields. I know my time has come.

Volumnius
Not so, my lord.

Brutus
No, I am sure it is, Volumnius. You see the world, Volumnius, the way it goes; Our enemies have driven us to the pit. [Low calls to arms.]

It is more worthy to jump in ourselves Than to wait till they push us. Good Volumnius, You know that the two of us went to school together;
Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it. Volumnius.
That's not an office for a friend, my lord. Clitus.
Fly, fly, my lord, there is no tarrying here. Brutus.
Farewell to you, and you, and you, Volumnius. Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen, My heart doth joy that yet in all my life I found no man but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day, More than Octavius and Mark Antony By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So, fare you well at once, for Brutus' tongue Hath almost ended his life's history. Night hangs upon mine eyes, my bones would rest That have but labor'd to attain this hour. Alarum. Cry within, "Fly, fly, fly!" Clitus.
Fly, my lord, fly. Brutus.
Hence! I will follow. Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.
I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord. Thou art a fellow of a good respect; Thy life hath had some smatch of honor in it. Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face, While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? Strato.
Give me your hand first. Fare you well, my lord. Brutus.
Farewell, good Strato. Runs on his sword.
Caesar, now be still; I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. Dies.
Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Antony, Messala, Lucilius, and the Army. Octavius.
What man is that? Messala.
My master's man. Strato, where is thy master? Strato.
Free from the bondage you are in, Messala: The conquerors can but make a fire of him; For Brutus only overcame himself, And no man else hath honor by his death. Lucilius.
So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus, That thou hast proved Lucilius' saying true. Octavius.
All that served Brutus, I will entertain them. Fellow, wilt thou bestowed thy time with me? If only because of that old friendship, I ask you To hold my sword hilts, while I run on it. Volumnius
That's not a job for a friend, my lord. Clitus
Run, run, my lord, there is no waiting here. Brutus
Farewell to you, and you, and you, Volumnius. Strato, you have been asleep all this time; Farewell to you too, Strato. Countrymen, My heart rejoices that still in all my life I met no man who wasn't true to me. I shall have glory from this losing day More than Octavius and Mark Antony Will gain from this evil victory. So fare you well at once, for Brutus' tongue Has almost ended his life's history. Night hangs on my eyes, my bones want to rest, They have only worked to reach this hour. [Call to arms. Cry within, "Run, run, run!"] Clitus
Run, my lord, run. Brutus
Go! I will follow. [Exit Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]
I ask you, Strato, stay by your lord. You are a fellow with a good reputation; Your life has some taste of honor in it. Hold my sword, and turn away your face, While I run upon it. Will you, Strato? Strato.
Give me your hand first. Farewell, my lord. Brutus.
Farewell, good Strato. [Runs on his sword.]
Caesar, now be still, I did not kill you with half as much resolve. [Dies.]
[Call to arms. Retreat. Enter Antony, Octavius, Messala, Lucilius, and the army.] Octavius.
What man is that? Messala.
My master's man. Strato, where is your master? Strato.
Free from the bondage you are in, Messala; The conquerors can only make a fire out of him; For Brutus only conquered himself, And no other man has honor from his death. Lucilius.
Just like that Brutus should be found. I thank you, Brutus, Because you have proved Lucilius' words true. Octavius.
I will take into my service everyone who served Brutus. Fellow, will you employ your time with me?
Strato.
Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Octavius.
Do so, good Messala.

Messala.
How did my master, Strato?

Strato.
I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Messala.
Octavius, then take him to follow thee
That did the last service to my master.

Antony.
This was the noblest Roman of them all.
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Caesar;
He only, in a general honest thought
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

Octavius.
According to his virtue let us use him
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones tonight shall lie,
Most like a soldier, ordered honorably,
So call the field to rest, and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt.
THE END

Strato
Yes, if Messala will recommend me to you.

Octavius
Do so, good Messala.

Messala
How did my master die, Strato?

Strato
I held the sword, and he ran onto it.

Messala
Octavius, then take him to follow you,
Who performed the last service to my master.

Antony
This was the noblest Roman of them all:
All the conspirators, except only him,
Did what they did because of envy of great Caesar;
He alone, out of a generally honest thought
And the common good of all, joined them.
His life was noble, and the elements
Were so balanced in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

Octavius
Let us treat him in accordance with his virtue,
With all respect and rites of burial.
His bones shall lie within my tent tonight,
Just like a soldier, treated honorably,
So call the army to rest and let's go,
To share the glories of this fortunate day.

[Exit all.]
