

California Consumer Guide to Wills, Living Trusts and Estate Planning

[August 2015 Edition]

NOTE: The information in this brochure is for residents of the State of California only. It provides for advice only and is not a complete statement of the law concerning all planning options. The laws governing tax and estate planning matters are complex and constantly changing. Should you desire legal advice, please consult with competent legal and/or tax counsel.

Robert P. Bergman, Estate Planning Attorney and Counselor at Law Planning for Your Most Important Asset...Your Family

Hi. I am attorney Bob Bergman. I have lived in Santa Clara County since 1968, and I've been a practicing attorney since 1980. As an attorney, I help families with disability and inheritance planning, including planning to avoid Conservatorship if you become disabled, and Probate at your death. I also help families take maximum advantage of the estate tax and inheritance laws pass on their property to their children or other heirs after death, which can include planning for asset protection for the inheritance for many generations. I also assist families that have children or other relatives with special needs with comprehensive supplemental needs trust planning to preserve an inheritance for the care of the special needs person.

Although my practice emphasizes working with families that have young children, I have clients at all stages of life, including clients married and unmarried, those with children and those without children. I am married and my wife Jennifer A. Lotz is a labor and employment attorney. I am also the father of twin daughters Giovanna and Sabrina.

I am a Certified Specialist in Estate Planning, Trust & Probate Law, certified by the California State Bar Board of Legal Specialization. To become board certified as a specialist, you must have years of experience in your practice area, pass a competitive examination, have specific continuing legal education in your field of practice, be recommended by your fellow attorneys, and be approved by the Board of Legal Specialization. This reflects my years of experience as an estate planning attorney.

Reflecting my commitment to estate planning as a specialty, I am also a member of WealthCounsel, an association of estate planning attorneys with over 3300 members throughout the United States. WealthCounsel attorneys share ideas and planning techniques with each other, and are on the cutting edge of estate planning issues and trends in the United States. My membership in WealthCounsel means that, although I practice as a sole practitioner in Santa Clara County, I do not practice alone, as I have access to the combined wisdom and expertise of my fellow attorneys in the WealthCounsel network.

As an estate planning specialist, my work is similar to that of an architect designing a custom home for my clients. In our meetings together, we will create a "blueprint" together for your custom estate plan that has the features and benefits you request and need. Then, once I have designed your estate plan, I will build your estate plan like a contractor, using the sophisticated drafting software available only to WealthCounsel members, combined with my years of experience as an estate planning attorney. Because of this approach, I am able to custom design every estate plan I prepare by hand, assuring that I meet your wishes and needs.

On the lighter side, I have sung and acted with several Bay Area performing companies, including the Lyric Theatre (Gilbert & Sullivan Society of San Jose), Lamplighters of San Francisco, the Stanford Savoyards, Mission City Opera, the West Valley Light Opera Association, the Sunnyvale Community Players and the Saratoga Drama Group. I am also an avid amateur military historian and collector of military board games and miniatures. I podcast on estate planning topics as LAWBOB RADIO at www.lawbobradio.com.

A Practical Definition of Estate Planning

“I want to control my property while I’m alive, and take care of me and my loved ones if I become disabled. I want to give my property to whom I want, the way I want, and when I want.

Furthermore, if I can, I want to save every last tax dollar, professional fee, and court cost legally possible.”

Estate Planning involves determining your needs, wants and desires for your property and your family. To carry out your wishes may also involve preparing several legal documents. It may involve planning for a special needs child, a second marriage, a noncitizen spouse, or other special things in your life. Planning is also needed for a child who has a drug, alcohol or gambling problem or other financial difficulties. Proper planning can also provide for asset protection for the inheritance you are passing on to your children or others.

Whether you are single or married, preparing a proper estate plan will help you avoid the expense and time delays of a Probate proceeding, help avoid the need for a Conservatorship if you become incapacitated while still alive, and may also reduce or eliminate the Federal Estate Tax (also known as the “Death Tax”) at your death.

About 65-70% of people in the United States do no Estate Planning at all. In this brochure, you will find out about all of the problems that can happen if you fail to plan. You will also find out some solutions to those problems.

The growth of online websites, software solutions, and many self-help books may give you the impression that estate planning is simple. You may also get the impression there are “standard” wills, living trusts, and other legal documents that create an estate plan. Unfortunately, there is no such thing as a “simple” Living Trust or a “simple” estate plan.

Estate Planning is a legal specialty that takes hundreds of hours of study and years of practice to master. “Do-it-Yourself” websites, software and books from the bookstore cannot take the place of the knowledge and skills of an experienced estate planning attorney. Also, because attorneys in California can say they practice in any area of law without being specifically qualified or trained to do so, many general practitioner attorneys sell “wills and trusts” as part of their law practice. These attorneys, like general practice doctors, are often trying to practice law at a level well beyond their experience and knowledge. An inexperienced general practice attorney trying to prepare a proper estate plan would be like a general practice doctor trying to be a brain surgeon.

If you had a brain tumor, you would not try to operate on yourself. You also would not use just any doctor to do the operation either. You should not try to do your own estate planning or use a general practice attorney for the same reasons. Estate planning is filled with legal issues and other complications. That’s why you need a competent, experienced estate planning attorney to guide you.

What is Your Estate?

To start our discussion about estate planning, let’s define what is meant by “your estate.” First, your estate contains all of the things you own, including:

- ✓ Your personal residence;
- ✓ Other real estate, such as a second home, commercial buildings, multi-family dwellings, apartments, raw land, and deeded timeshares, etc.;
- ✓ Annuities and life insurance on your life (often overlooked);
- ✓ Retirement plans, such as IRAs, 401(k), 403(b), 457, Keogh Plans, and pension plans;
- ✓ Stocks, bonds and mutual funds owned directly or through a brokerage account, not including any of these owned in retirement plans;
- ✓ Checking accounts, savings account, money market accounts, and certificates of deposit;
- ✓ Business interests, including any shares owned in a corporation, LLC, LLP, or FLP
- ✓ Stock options
- ✓ Personal property, e.g. furniture, jewelry, clothing, antiques...all of your stuff.

Second, your estate also includes...

YOUR FAMILY!

That's right. Your spouse or partner, your children, grandchildren, parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins, or even those you make your family – they are part of your estate. Therefore, estate planning includes not only planning for your property, but also planning for those in your family you care for.

Why Do Estate Planning?

There are several reasons for you to do estate planning. Here are just a few:

- ✓ You want avoid a Conservatorship while you are alive if you become disabled;
- ✓ You want to avoid the Probate process for your family when you die;
- ✓ You need guardians for your young children, and you're afraid that they might lose their inheritance;
- ✓ You have a special needs child or other beneficiary;
- ✓ You are concerned about your family fighting over their inheritance;
- ✓ You are worried that your estate might be lost due to an extended nursing home stay;
- ✓ You have a loved one in the hospital in a coma or dying;
- ✓ You are worried that your home or business might have to be sold after your death to pay for taxes, debts, or other fees and costs;
- ✓ You are in a second marriage, and you want to make sure that your share of the property passes on to your children or grandchildren and not to those of your spouse;
- ✓ You or your spouse are non-citizens, and you want to make sure that your property can be passed on to them
- ✓ You want to minimize or eliminate the federal estate tax (i.e. the "Death Tax"), preserve your estate, and pass it on to the next generation;
- ✓ You want to pass on your values to your children and grandchildren; OR

You Want Peace of Mind!

Ultimately, the reasons to do estate planning are specific to each family, and no two families are exactly alike.

Here in Santa Clara County where I practice law, families come from a wide variety of cultural, religious, ethnic, and family backgrounds. About one-half of my clients are from countries other than the United States, including India, China, South Africa, Great Britain, the Philippines, Germany, and many others. Many are naturalized U.S. citizens, and many are permanent residents. Because of the many financial, spiritual and cultural differences between these families, you should customize estate planning to the specific needs of each family.

In this Consumer Guide, most of the discussion and issues will apply equally to unmarried individuals and married couples, registered domestic partners and unregistered “life partners.” In addition, many of the issues apply whether you have children or do not. Whenever something only applies to married couples or those with young children, I will clarify it.

Popular Planning Option: Do Nothing at All!

Your first option is to do nothing. This is the most popular planning option, “chosen” by 65%-70% of the people in the United States.

There are some definite advantages to doing nothing all:

- ✓ No Out-Of-Pocket Costs!
- ✓ No Lawyers!
- ✓ No Paperwork!
- ✓ You Don’t Have To Think About Dying!
- ✓ You’ll Be Gone, So Why Worry About It?

If you die without an estate plan in place, this is called dying “intestate.” This means you have no “Last Will and Testament.” The person who dies is called the “decedent.”

If you die intestate in California, state law has written a distribution plan for your estate. It’s called the “laws of intestate succession.” The laws of intestate succession decide who gets your property, how much they will receive, and when they will receive it. The people who receive your property are called your “heirs.”

The laws of intestate succession distribute property to your “next of kin,” or those relatives who are most closely related to you. However, because the laws are specific, your property could be distributed to distant relatives you don’t even know, or could be distributed to stepchildren or to relatives you would not want to receive your property. Your estate will usually also have to go through a formal legal process called Probate Administration through the Probate Court in the county where you were living. Probate Administration is described in more detail below.

Planning Option: Make a Will

If you make a Will, you are said to die “testate.” This means you have a Last Will and Testament you have written. With a Will, you instruct the Probate Court for how you want your property distributed when you die. This can differ from what the laws of intestate succession would indicate. You can also name guardians for your minor children in your Will, and waive certain costs and expenses that the law might require.

However, like doing nothing, having a Will still means your estate often must go through the formal Probate Administration process.

Probate: “The Attorneys’ Retirement Plan”

In California, administration of an estate through the Probate Court will be required if you die owning property in your name or payable to your estate that is worth at least $150,000 in total value. The total value includes property such as stocks, bonds, mutual funds, and checking and savings accounts.

Even if you don't have $150,000 of property, Probate is still required if you own California real estate worth at least $50,000. These values only went up on January 1, 2012, and had not changed since I practiced law in 1980, even though real estate prices have risen dramatically over the past 30 years.

Ancillary Probate Proceedings:

If you own real estate in more than one state, there will have to be an “ancillary” or secondary Probate proceeding in each other state where you own real property. This is because each individual state may control the distribution of property within its own borders. Each ancillary Probate proceeding will have its own filing fees, costs, and time delays, which will be different for each state.

In Probate, the Probate Judge will supervise the ultimate administration of your estate. Certain types of property can be passed on to your heirs without going through the full Probate process. These can include:

- ✓ Property held as “Joint Tenants With Right of Survivorship” with one or more other people;
- ✓ Property held as “Community Property” with your spouse or California Registered Domestic Partner;
- ✓ Property held as “Community Property With Right of Survivorship” with your spouse or California Registered Domestic Partner;
- ✓ Life Insurance, annuities and retirement plans you made payable directly to one or more people (i.e. your “beneficiaries”) who are alive at your death;
- ✓ POD (“Pay on Death”) or TOD (“Transfer on Death”) bank or brokerage accounts you owned at financial institutions you made payable directly to one beneficiaries who are alive at your death, and
- ✓ Property owned by your Revocable Living Trust, either alone or with your spouse.

Here in California, if you have property in your name or payable to your estate at your death, and the total market value of that property is under $150,000 of property, that property can be passed on to your heirs by preparing a “Small Estate Affidavit.” The $150,000 amount can include California real property with a market value of under $50,000, which leaves out most residences or rental properties. If you own real estate worth less than $50,000 as part of the $150,000 amount, then a petition must be filed with the Probate Court to transfer the property. However, a full Probate proceeding is not needed.

NOTE: Your property that passes through Joint Tenancy with Right of Survivorship, Community Property with Right of Survivorship, beneficiary designations, and POD or TOD is not subject to the Probate process at all. This means you cannot change who receives property by a Will or Living Trust.

The Probate Process in California

In the Probate process, a person who has died is called a “decedent.” Probate can be defined as administration and distribution of a decedent’s property or estate after they die supervised by the Probate Court of the county where you are a resident. When a decedent’s estate goes through Probate, the following steps must occur:

1. Paperwork is filed with the Probate Court, setting a court hearing date. In Santa Clara County where I practice, a court hearing date can be reserved approximately 75-80 days after a request is made. The paperwork can then be prepared and filed with the Probate Court. Other counties in California may not even schedule a court date until all paperwork is prepared and filed with the Probate Court, and then you can receive a court date. This can cause even more delay in those counties;

2. Notice is given to the heirs of the decedent. The "heirs" are those people who will inherit the decedent's property, determined by the laws of the State of California in the Probate Code;
3. On the scheduled court hearing date, the Probate Judge appoints a Personal Representative to handle the decedent's property. This person may be called the "Executor" if the decedent had a Will (called dying "testate"), and an "Administrator" if the decedent did not have Will (called dying "intestate");
4. The decedent's property and debts are identified, the decedent's creditors are notified, and the property is then valued both by the Personal Representative and perhaps by a court-appointed appraiser called the "Probate Referee;"
5. The decedent's heirs are identified by the Probate Judge, following the laws of intestate succession or the Will of the decedent. The Probate Judge follows the decedent's Will if one exists, or the laws of "intestate succession" if there is no Will;
6. Creditors, attorney's fees, Personal Representative fees and other debts, fees and expenses are paid; then
7. FINALLY – the decedent's remaining property is distributed to the decedent's heirs

Advantages Claimed for Probate Proceedings

There are several possible advantages for a decedent's estate in a Probate proceeding:

1. The Probate Court protects the heirs and beneficiaries. If there are any disputes between heirs and beneficiaries, creditors of the decedent, or other issues that arise, the Probate Court is there to supervise;
2. Probate cuts off the claims of creditors after the four-month period following the issuance of "Letters Testamentary" or "Letters of Administration." Notice of the Probate must be published in a local newspaper that has general circulation in the area where the decedent lived. Anybody who thinks the decedent owed them money for any reason then has a four-month period in which to file a creditor's claim with the Probate Court. Failure to file such a claim by the creditor within the four month period means that the claim is terminated. (Note: This does not apply to secured creditors, such as a bank mortgage);
3. The transfer of title is a public record that prevents potential problems with title companies insuring the transfer of the title: Because the distribution of real estate from a Probate is done by a court order of the Probate Court, a title company may rely on that judgment;
4. Questions and disputes are settled under the protection and guidance of the Probate Court. The Probate Court is there to act as a referee and final judge of any disputes that arise between heirs, people who think they should have been heirs, creditors, etc.;
5. The Probate estate of the decedent is a separate taxpayer and some tax savings may result (not a big issue); and
6. Probate costs may also be deductible for income tax or death tax purposes (also not a big issue.)

Costs of Probate

The Dollar Costs of Probate: There are many fees and costs associated with Probate. Various fees are based on the gross value of the decedent's estate, not the net value. If you own a house with a fair market value of $750,000, and you have a $500,000 mortgage on the house, you would consider that to be a $250,000 asset, because your equity in the property is $250,000 ($750,000 market value minus the $500,000 mortgage). However, in Probate Court, the fair market value of your home determines the value of the estate for the calculation of various fees and costs. This is similar to the valuation of a house when sold by a realtor, where the realtor's commission is based on the "sale price" and not the seller's equity in the house. That means that, for Probate, your house would be valued at $750,000.

Example: Under current law, a $1,000,000 estate comprising a house worth $750,000 and $250,000 in bank accounts and investments would have the following anticipated fees and costs:

1. Current Probate Court filing fee of $435.00, and a final distribution court filing fee of $435.00;
2. Statutory Attorneys' fees of $23,000, with more fees authorized by the Probate Court if the attorney does "extraordinary" legal services for the estate;
3. Statutory Personal Representative's fees of $23,000;
4. Probate Referee's fee of about $1,000, plus costs; and;
5. Newspaper publication fee of $115 to $400 or more for the local newspaper where the decedent lived.

TOTAL COST OF OVER $48,000, OR NEARLY 5% OF THE GROSS VALUE OF THE ESTATE!

Other Probate Costs: There are several other costs of Probate, such as:

Lost Privacy

When your estate goes through Probate, everything becomes public record!

- ✓ Everything you owned
- ✓ What your property was worth
- ✓ Everybody you owed, and how much you owed them
- ✓ The names and ages of your heirs, and where they live
- ✓ What assets your heirs will receive from your estate

Because of the public nature of Probate, there are bad people such as the character to the left who specifically go through the Probate records to locate heirs that may be too young or financially immature to handle their inheritance. They then contact these heirs with investment schemes or other fraudulent plans so they can separate the heirs from their inheritance.

Lost Time

Probate proceedings can take a long time. The typical Probate takes from 9 months to 2 years or more! It is not unusual for Probate proceedings to last for several years if assets are difficult to sell or distribute. Because of the time of Probate proceedings, this can lead to lost opportunities for your children or other heirs. Because your assets are held up in the Probate process for several months or even years, your assets are not available for:

- ✓ Pay tuition for your children's or grandchildren's education
- ✓ Provide money for a child to purchase a home, or start a business or professional practice

Conservatorship: (The Living Probate)

There is another problem with having no Will or just having a Will. If you become incapacitated because of a heart attack, stroke, accident, or illness, you may lose the ability to handle your financial affairs. However, even your own spouse or partner will have no legal right to sign your name or handle your business affairs! Instead, they will need to go to the Probate Court and obtain a Conservatorship for you.

A Conservatorship is a guardianship for an adult. In some states, the term “guardianship” refers to both adults and minor children. The Court appoints two types of Conservator to take care of you, the “Conservatee,” and your property. The Conservators can be the same person. The Conservator are:

The Conservator of the Person: This person is given authority by the Probate Court to make medical and health care decisions for you, including your medical treatment, where you will live, what you will eat, and everything else concerning your health.

The Conservator of the Estate: This person gathers together your property, having it valued, accounting for all income and disbursements from your property, and taking care of your property. This person also has the legal right to deal with government agencies on your behalf, file and defend against lawsuits, and does anything with your property you could, all subject to court review.

Regular accountings must be filed with the Probate Court, and the Court appoints a Court Investigator to interview your family and friends and the proposed Conservator, which is done on at least an annual basis if you are “conserved.”

All of the costs of the Conservator are paid out of your assets. Similar to a Probate proceeding, a Conservatorship proceeding has filing fees, notice requirements, attorneys’ fees, accounting fees, and other costs associated with it.

Avoiding Conservatorship

Both the Conservatorship of the Person and the Conservatorship of the Estate can be avoided by having, at a minimum, the following documents:

The Advance Health Care Directive: California law makes it possible to grant authority to an individual to make health care decisions for you if you lack the capacity to do so for yourself. Such a situation could occur if you are in a coma or have been declared mentally incompetent by a court of law.

The Advance Health Care Directive is a legal document prepared and signed by you while you are alive. It is designed to only take effect when and if you cannot make health care decisions for yourself. The document permits you to outline the treatment, medications, etc. that you do not want, funeral arrangements, and other special wishes and desires which you may have concerning your health care. Because of the personal nature of the document, you can even appoint a non-relative to make these health care decisions for you. This may be appropriate if you believe that your close relatives would be too influenced by emotion rather than your best interests.

A well-drafted Advance Health Care Directive will be very detailed and will be customized especially for you. It will deal with many more issues than the simple forms (called the “statutory form”) that are available through hospitals or physicians. In addition, you may nominate a Conservator for yourself in this document, or in a separate document. A Conservator is similar to a Guardian for a minor child, but instead is appointed by a court to take custody of a legal adult because of physical and/or mental incapacity.

HIPAA Authorization Form: The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, better known as the “HIPAA law,” is a law concerned with medical privacy. Absent written authority, any health care provider for you can reveal none of your confidential medical information to anyone, including your spouse or partner, without risking liability for revealing this information.

The HIPAA Authorization Form provides that written authority, permitting those persons you identify to obtain whatever medical information you authorize. California also has a medical privacy law, called the Confidential Medical Information Act (“CMIA”).

The General Durable Power of Attorney: California law also makes it possible to grant authority to an individual to handle day-to-day financial matters for you if you lack the capacity to do so for yourself. The General Durable Power of Attorney will enable the person you appoint, called your “Attorney in Fact” or “Agent,” to have as little or as much authority as you grant. Your Agent also has the authority to exercise many of your personal rights on your behalf, such as filing or defending a lawsuit, entering into or enforcing contracts, running a business, or dealing with government agencies and programs such as the IRS, Social Security, Medicare, and Medi-Cal (the Medicaid program in California).

As with the Advance Health Care Directive, a well-drafted General Durable Power of Attorney will be very detailed and will deal with many more issues than the simple form that is generally available in any stationary store. If both documents are properly drafted and used with a Revocable Living Trust, the need for a Conservator may be completely avoided. A Conservatorship will otherwise cost several thousand dollars to establish, and will require regular accountings to be filed on your behalf.

If you wish, your Agent may also make gifts from your property to continue a charitable giving program you have, or to reduce your taxable estate for estate tax purposes, to pay tuition for your children or grandchildren, or many other reasons. Properly drafted, your Agent may also do additional estate planning with your assets, and may also engage in long term care planning to preserve some or all of your estate if you need to go into a nursing home.

Planning Option: Use Joint Tenancy Ownership

Effects of Joint Tenancy Ownership

Some people plan their estate by owning everything as Joint Tenants with their spouse, partner, or children in “Joint Tenancy,” “or “Joint Tenants with right of survivorship,” which can be abbreviated as JTWROS, JTROS, or even JT, on banking and brokerage account statements.

Joint Tenancy has many features that make it attractive. First, a Joint Tenancy comprises one or more “Joint Tenants” who collectively own property, such as a house or bank account. One of the major features of Joint Tenancy is the “right of survivorship,” so the last surviving Joint Tenant owns all of the property.

Property held in Joint Tenancy does not go through the Probate Court process, but instead passes to the surviving Joint Tenant or Joint Tenants by operation of California law. This means, however, that if a person makes a Will or Living Trust and tries to leave their interest in a Joint Tenancy property, the Will or Living Trust does not control where the property goes – the Joint Tenancy laws take over and distribute the property to the surviving Joint Tenant(s).

Even though Joint Tenancy property passes to the surviving Joint Tenant(s), the deceased Joint Tenant’s interest in the property is still part of their estate for the federal estate tax. This includes not only real estate, but stocks, bonds, mutual funds, brokerage accounts, checking and savings accounts, certificates of deposit, and similar types of property.

IMPORTANT NOTE: Even though Joint Tenancy ownership avoids Probate at the death of the first Joint Tenant, it does not avoid Probate at the death of the surviving Joint Tenant. Joint Tenancy ownership does not ultimately avoid Probate – it only delays it until the death of the last Joint Tenant!

Income Tax Concept of “Cost Basis” for “Capital Assets”

Property such as a personal residence, stock, bonds, mutual funds, and precious metals are called “capital assets.” The sale of a capital asset may trigger an income tax “capital” gain or loss. Whether or not there is a capital gain or loss is determined using the tax concept of “cost basis.”

Cost basis refers to the value of capital assets for capital gains income tax purposes, used to calculate a capital gain or loss on the sale of the asset. Typically the cost basis is the purchase price or acquisition price of the capital asset. Someone purchasing a home for $500,000 would have a “cost basis” of $500,000. If the house goes up in value and is then sold, the increase in the value of the property over the original cost basis is “capital gain.” This may trigger a federal and state income tax on that capital gain. If the property in this example with a cost basis of $500,000 was then sold for $700,000, there is a potential capital gain of $200,000 ($700,000 sale price minus $500,000 cost basis).

“Step Up” in “Cost Basis” On Death of Owner

Under current law, when a person dies their ownership interest in a capital asset received an income tax “step up” or increase in the cost basis of the capital asset. This increase in capital gains cost basis permits income tax savings if the property is then sold by whoever inherited the deceased person’s interest in the property.

Joint Tenancy vs. Community Property Ownership

Joint Tenancy ownership of property by a married couple is defined in the law as husband and wife each owning a “divided” one-half interest in the property. Community Property ownership of property by a married couple is defined in the law as husband and wife each owning an “undivided” one-half interest in the property. The difference in the ownership definitions can lead to very different income tax results when the first spouse dies.

Income Tax Treatment for Joint Tenancy Property

When a married couple owns property as Joint Tenants, the Surviving Spouse will receive a “step up” in the cost basis of the property equal to the “divided” share of the spouse that died. If real estate was originally purchased for $200,000 (the “cost basis”) and is now worth $500,000, the equity in the property would be $300,000. The divided interest of each spouse would be $150,000. At the death of the first spouse, the Surviving Spouse would receive a new cost basis of $350,000 calculated: $200,000 original cost + $150,000 equity interest of Deceased Spouse.

If the property were then sold for the fair market value of $500,000, the Surviving Spouse would have a potential taxable gain of $150,000 (i.e. the Surviving Spouse’s share of the equity), at combined California state capital gains tax rate of up to 13.3%, and federal capital gains tax rate of up to 20%, depending on what income tax bracket the taxpayer is in the year the property is sold. [Please Note: This example is not intended to apply the sale of a personal residence, which has special exemptions of taxable gain of $250,000 per owner of the property)

Income Tax Treatment of Community Property

Property owned as Community Property by a married couple has many differences with Joint Tenancy:

- 1). Each spouse may dispose of his or her share of the Community Property by Will or Living Trust;
- 2). Community Property will be subject to Probate (although a simplified procedure in the Probate Code permits the rapid transfer of Community Property to the Surviving Spouse with no full-length Probate proceeding); and
- 3). When property is held as Community Property, the Surviving Spouse will receive a better “stepped-up” cost basis than when the property is owned as Joint Tenants. The benefit will be so much better that Joint Tenancy ownership should not even be considered by a married couple!

When a married couple owns property as Community Property, under the law it cannot be determined which half of the property was owned by the Deceased Spouse, because the ownership is an undivided one-half interest! This means that when the first spouse dies, the tax law treats each half of the property as owned by the Deceased Spouse. Using the previous example of a property purchased for $200,000 now worth $500,000, the equity in the property is still $300,000. However, the undivided one-half interest of the Deceased Spouse is equal to each half of the property. Therefore, at the death of the first spouse, the Surviving Spouse would receive a new cost basis calculated:

$200,000 original cost basis + $300,000 equity interest of Deceased Spouse (both halves of the property) = $500,000

If the property were then sold for the fair market value of $500,000, the Surviving Spouse would have a potential taxable gain of $0! This means the effective capital gains tax rate is 0%, because there is no taxable capital gain.

This does not appear to make sense. How can the Deceased Spouse own 100% of the equity at death? It is how Community Property is defined in the law. The Deceased Spouse is treated as if he or she owned 100% of the property at death. This means that 100% of the value of the property is "stepped up" at the first death. Ownership as Community Property is more beneficial than Joint Tenancy ownership for a married couple.

It should be emphasized that the above potential income savings apply to any appreciating capital asset held by a married couple in California as Community Property, including real estate, stocks, bonds, classic automobiles, jewelry, china, silverware, etc. NOTE, HOWEVER, THE “STEP UP” IN BASIS DOES NOT APPLY TO CAPITAL ASSETS HELD INSIDE OF RETIREMENT PLAN, SUCH AS IRAS AND 401K PLANS. SUCH ASSETS ARE TREATED AS “CASH.”

Community Property with Right of Survivorship (CPWROS)

This form of ownership is only available to married couples. Ownership in this form has a right of survivorship similar to Joint Tenancy, but Community Property treatment for other purposes.

Property held in this form of ownership may have the tax benefits of Community Property, specifically the 100% “step up” in cost basis discussed above for Community Property, although that is not clear under Federal law. The term “Community Property” is defined by the Internal Revenue Service as eligible for the benefits of a full “stepped up cost basis” to the current fair market value. The term “Community Property With Right of Survivorship” is not defined by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Joint Tenancy With Right of Survivorship" is also defined by the Internal Revenue Service. Because CPWROS property is similar to Joint Tenancy ownership with the “survivorship” feature described above, the concern is that the Internal Revenue Service will treat CPWROS property in the same way as Joint Tenancy property for income tax purposes for the “step up” in cost basis discussed in the previous two sections of this brochure.

Because of the uncertainty in the law, I do not recommend this form of ownership for married couples in the State of California.

AN IMPORTANT NOTE: Property owned by a married couple in Joint Tenancy or Community Property might avoid Probate on the first death, but will not avoid Probate on the second death unless steps are taken to remove the property completely from the Probate process. The Revocable Living Trust can accomplish all of the benefits of these forms of ownership, with none of the detriments.

Planning Option: Use Beneficiary Designations

Beneficiary designations include assets where you can name one or more beneficiaries to receive the assets upon your death. Typical assets include retirement plans such as Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), 401(k) plans, 403(b) plans, 457 plans, pension plans, and annuities. They may also include checking accounts, savings accounts, certificates of deposit, money market accounts, brokerage accounts and, in some states, real property.

Beneficiary designations, while useful for small value assets, can create a lot of problems when used as the sole means of estate planning. While it may seem obvious, for a beneficiary designation to work properly, the person named as the beneficiary must survive the person who owns the assets. If the beneficiary does not survive the owner, and there is no contingent or secondary beneficiary named, then the asset will probably end up payable to the owner’s Probate estate. It may then pass by the laws of intestate succession inheritance to more distant family members or may even pass to a family member who the owner specifically did not want to receive the asset.

As another example of the wrong person receiving the asset, take the following example: Husband names wife as beneficiary of his life insurance. Later, the couple gets divorced; however, husband fails to change the beneficiary of his life insurance. Under California law, beneficiary designations on retirement plans and bank accounts are revoked as a matter of law when a couple gets divorced, but not with life insurance. If the husband get remarried and fails to change the life insurance beneficiary, the proceeds will go to the first wife instead of the second wife. Probably not the result the husband intended!

If assets name a minor beneficiary to receive the asset, this will trigger a Guardianship proceeding for the property. The property will then be held until the minor beneficiary reaches age 18 years, when it will be turned over, free of any conditions or restraint. Probably not the best result for an 18-year old to receive an inheritance outright.

Planning Option: Using the Revocable Living Trust

The best and most flexible estate planning option is to use a revocable living trust. A revocable living trust is a contract made between the owner of property (the “Trustor”) and a “Trustee,” named by the Trustor of the property to handle the property during the Trustor’s lifetime.

The living trust is “revocable,” so the Trustor may amend, modify, change or even revoke the living trust. There are several types of living trusts available. They are described below:

The “Bare Bones” Living Trust

This living trust is familiar because it is common. Suze Orman, Nolo Press, legalzoom.com – all of these are sources for “do-it-yourself” living trusts. You can also get books at Barnes and Noble to make your own living trust, or pick up software in the bargain bin at Office Depot, Staples, Office Max, or online.

I call these “bare bones” living trusts, because they are typically very incomplete, and often will not survive legal challenges after someone had died. Like a skeleton with no muscles or skin, they will often collapse in a heap when tested. Unfortunately, the test will come after someone has died, when it is too late to make changes or correct the problems.

These planning options have the following in common:

- ✓ They prepare “one size fits all” documents with no customization
- ✓ They rarely reflect the specific needs and wishes of your family
- ✓ They are cheap, and you get what you pay for
- ✓ They can’t ask you questions that must be asked
- ✓ They can’t legally answer your questions
- ✓ They miss many important issues such as blended families (i.e. children from previous marriages or relationships), non-citizen spouses, special needs children or other heirs, etc.
- ✓ They accept no legal responsibility if something goes wrong and their plan doesn’t work!

No matter how much you read about living trusts, no books, websites or software alone can guide you into creating a living trust estate plan appropriate for you and your family. Books, websites and software can’t ask you the important, hard questions, and they can’t answer questions about your situation. Only a trained, experienced estate planning attorney can do that.

The “Trust Mill” Trust

Many companies come through communities offering free living trust seminars in multiple locations. They will advertise cheap “Living Trust Packages,” or amazing discounts on fees. In the small print on their ads, it will often read “your living trust package will be delivered to you by a licensed insurance professional.” These companies are interested in only one thing – access to your financial information. The living trust package provides them with that financial information so they can sell you costly annuities or mutual funds. They are not any better than the “bare bones” living trust, and often much worse.

The Fully-Funded Revocable Living Trust

The best living trust solution is a fully-funded revocable living trust prepared by an experienced estate planning attorney. “Fully-funded” refers to the legal concept of “funding” a trust, which means the transfer of property into trust ownership.

Who Should Prepare Your Living Trust Estate Plan for You?

Be careful about having your living trust estate plan prepared by an attorney who advertises that they do Wills and Living Trusts, and bankruptcy, personal injury, divorce, general business, or several other additional areas of practice. Such a person is likely a “general practitioner” attorney, who may have no special expertise in estate planning. You need to know that estate planning is a legal specialty under the law, and you need to work with somebody who devotes all or a substantial part of their practice to estate planning.

Just like you would not have your general practice doctor do surgery on your brain, you should not use just any attorney to prepare your estate plan for you. There is no legal requirement that an attorney be specially trained to prepare Wills and living trusts and offer them to the general public. Many general practice attorneys prepare Wills and trusts, often after attending a seminar and buying forms to use. These attorneys are usually not estate planning attorneys, and cannot assist you in the special planning needs for you and your family.

Use an expert planning attorney who devotes all or a substantial part of his or her practice to estate planning, such as a Certified Specialist in Estate Planning, Trust & Probate Law also a member of WealthCounsel, a national association of attorneys who specialize in estate planning using proprietary software to draft custom plans for their clients.

The Revocable Living Trust: An In-Depth Discussion

The Revocable Living Trust is an estate planning tool with tremendous flexibility and potential for individuals and married couples to avoid Probate and Conservatorship. For married couples, it can also help to minimize or even eliminate the federal estate tax, often called the “Death Tax.,” which is discussed later in this brochure. For individuals and most married couples, the avoidance of Probate and Conservatorship are the major benefits.

Avoiding Probate and Conservatorship Using the Revocable Living Trust

As previously discussed, the Probate laws of the State of California require a Probate proceeding when a person dies owning real property worth at least $50,000, or has other property in their name worth at least $150,000 in total value. Property owned by a revocable living trust is not subject to a Probate proceeding, because under the Probate laws, such property is not considered to be owned by you when you die for Probate only! The Probate Court need not be involved in the ultimate distribution of the property to your heirs or beneficiaries.

Even if all of a person’s property in California is not owned by their revocable living trust, it still may be possible to have their property declared to be part of their living trust by the Probate Court without going through a formal Probate proceeding. This may be possible if there is a schedule of assets attached to the living trust that identifies the bank accounts, real estate, brokerage accounts, etc. that you intended to be owned by your trust. It may be possible to have a Probate Court order such property to be turned over to your living trust by using a special Will called a “Pour-over Will” that is typically prepared at the same time as your Living Trust. In Santa Clara County, this legal relief is regularly granted by the Probate Court. Other county Probate Courts may still require a full Probate proceeding.

By using a revocable living trust combined with a well-drafted General Durable Power of Attorney and Advance Health Care Directive (described above), you can avoid the need for a Conservatorship for you as well.

The “Death Tax” (Federal Estate Tax)

For some families, another issue may affect them when someone dies in the United States and owns property anywhere in the world. It is called the federal estate tax, often called the “Death Tax.”

When you die, the federal government imposes a tax on the value of your assets you owned. Some states also impose an inheritance tax on your estate. California has no inheritance tax.

The federal estate tax affects U.S. Citizens, non-citizen residents, and even property in the United States owned by nonresidents at time of death.

The Unlimited Marital Deduction

With a married couple, if one of the spouses dies (i.e. the “Deceased Spouse”) and leaves some or all of his/her property to the spouse that survives (i.e. the “Surviving Spouse”), then the Surviving Spouse will qualify for a special Death Tax benefit called the Unlimited Marital Deduction. The Deceased Spouse’s property can be left outright to the Surviving Spouse, or in an irrevocable (i.e. “unchangeable”) trust that permits the Surviving Spouse to have the use and benefit of the Deceased Spouse’s property without having the right to decide the who will eventually receive the property when the Surviving Spouse dies.

The Unlimited Marital Deduction or “UMD” will apply if the Surviving Spouse is a United States citizen or a permanent resident of the United States. With a United States citizen, the UMD is automatic, and it means that an unlimited amount of property can be left to the Surviving Spouse from the Deceased Spouse’s estate with no Death Tax.

With a non-citizen Surviving Spouse, the UMD may only be used if the property is placed into an irrevocable trust called a Qualified Domestic Trust, or QDOT. The property of the Deceased Spouse can benefit the Surviving Spouse that is a non-citizen for his or her lifetime.

If the Unlimited Marital Deduction applies, there is no Death Tax imposed on the Deceased Spouse’s property when it passes to the Surviving Spouse. An unlimited amount of property of the Deceased Spouse can be passed on to the Surviving Spouse, and it acts as a deduction from the value of the Deceased Spouse’s taxable estate for Death Tax purposes.

The Unlimited Marital Deduction defers the Death Tax until the death of the Surviving Spouse. When the Surviving Spouse dies, their own property and the property received from the Deceased Spouse, whether outright or in trust, is added together to determine the value of the Surviving Spouse’s Death Tax estate. If the estate is then passed on to the Surviving Spouse’s heirs, a Death Tax might be owed if the estate is too large.

The “Death Tax” Applicable Exclusion Amount (“AEA”)

The current Death Tax laws for residents of the United States grant an exemption from taxation of a certain value of estate, technically called the Applicable Exclusion Amount or “AEA.” The AEA covers transfers at death to people other than your Surviving Spouse who is a U.S. Citizen, such as your children, a non-citizen spouse, or other heirs. These transfers could be outright or in trust.

The following is a brief history of the AEA over the past several years, concluding with the current rules put into effect in January of 2013.

In 2008, the Death Tax AEA covered an estate valued at $2,000,000 or less. In 2009, the Death Tax AEA increased to $3,500,000, with a maximum tax rate 45% of your estate if your estate was greater than $3,500,000 in value at your death.

TRUIRJCA

(The Tax Relief, Unemployment Insurance Reauthorization and Job Creation Act of 2010)

In 2010, for that year and that year only, the Death Tax was repealed. This meant that the family of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner would not have to pay any Death Tax, nor would the families of at least three other billionaires who died in 2010. Unfortunately, the Death Tax was scheduled to return on January 1, 2011 with an AEA of $1,000,000 and tax rates from 41% to 55% for estates larger than that amount!

However, in December of 2010, Congress passed and the President signed the “Tax Relief, Unemployment Insurance Reauthorization and Job Creation Act of 2010” (TRUIRJCA), which I will refer to as the Tax Relief Act of 2010 or TRA-2010. This new law put the Death Tax back in place for 2010 with a $5,000,000 exemption. It also extended the Death Tax through the end of 2012, again with an Applicable Exclusion Amount (AEA) or exemption from the tax of $5,000,000 for tax year 2011 and $5,120,000 for tax year 2012, both years with a maximum estate tax rate of 35% for estates larger than the Death Tax AEA. TRA-2010 also gave the option of using the 2010 tax law with the repeal of the Death Tax for the estates of those persons dying in 2010. The new law also put back in the old capital gains “stepped up” basis rules changed for 2010. The reasons an estate might be covered by the law of 2010 are beyond this brochure.

ATRA (The American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012)

Unfortunately again, TRA-2010, while solving the uncertainty for families where someone died in 2010 through 2012, still had the Death Tax scheduled to return on January 1, 2013 with that AEA of $1,000,000 and tax rates from 41% to 55% for estates larger than that amount.

After delaying dealing with the issue until the last days of December of 2012, two years after the last Death Tax law, Congress and the President finally acted in the first couple of days of January of 2013. The result was the “American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012,” or “ATRA.”

ATRA raised the AEA to cover an estate size of $5,250,000, with a 40% tax rate on estates larger than that amount. This change in the Death Tax AEA is stated to be “permanent.” However, in Washington language, “permanent” only means until they play with it again.

For 2015, the AEA has gone up to $5,430,000, with a 40% tax rate on estates larger than that amount.

The “Typical” Revocable Living Trust for Married Couples and Planning Options

The typical Revocable Living Trust historically prepared in California is often called an “ABC Marital Trust.” This Trust will name the Husband and Wife as the Trustors (i.e. those establishing the Trust), and the Trustees (i.e. those in charge of the Trust and its property), and the Beneficiaries (i.e. those receiving the benefit of the Trust).

This typical Trust will provide that, upon the death of the first spouse (i.e. the “Deceased Spouse”), the Trust either will be or may be divided into two or more trusts to be administered separately from that day on. One or more of the trusts will for be the benefit of the children of the marriage or other heirs of the Deceased Spouse, while one or more of the trusts will benefit the remaining spouse, or the “Surviving Spouse.”

Whether or not the ABC Marital Trust requires a division of the couples’ property into two or more trusts or permits a division depends on how the trust is drafted. Most revocable living trusts drafted in the 1980s and 1990s required the division of the property into two or more trusts after the death of the Deceased Spouse. As seen in a later section, this may not be the best solution for many families.

What is the “A Trust” in an ABC Marital Trust?

The “A Trust,” or the “Survivor’s Trust,” is established for the Surviving Spouse. It typically contains the one-half of the Community Property owned by the Surviving Spouse of the marriage, plus any separate property owned by the Surviving Spouse. It may also contain property received from the Deceased Spouse’s estate. The property from the Deceased Spouse’s estate will likely qualify for the Unlimited Marital Deduction to avoid any Death Tax liability, discussed earlier in this brochure.

The Survivor’s Trust is “revocable,” so the Surviving Spouse may amend, cancel or modify the terms of the Survivor’s Trust if desired.

On the death of the Surviving Spouse, the Survivor's Trust will usually add its property to the property owned by Trust B. The property from the Survivor's Trust will then qualify for the Death Tax AEA of the Surviving Spouse in effect in the year of death.

What is the "B Trust" in an ABC Marital Trust?

The "B Trust" or the "Bypass Trust," will likely contain the Deceased Spouse's one-half of the Community Property, plus any separate property owned by the Deceased Spouse. However, the total value of property that can be placed into the Bypass Trust without a Death Tax is limited to the Death Tax AEA. The Death Tax AEA will be determined in the year of the Deceased Spouse's death.

The Death Tax AEA for 2013 and thereafter will be $5,250,000, and will be indexed for inflation in future years. The Bypass Trust is intended to "bypass" taxation in the estate of the Surviving Spouse when the Surviving Spouse dies.

What is the "C Trust" in an ABC Marital Trust?

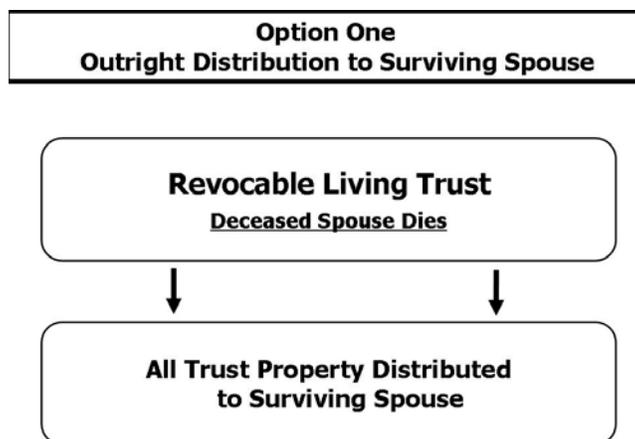

The "C Trust" or the "Marital QTIP Trust" should contain any property of the Deceased Spouse that is greater than the AEA. The Marital QTIP Trust qualifies for the Unlimited Marital Deduction, discussed previously. The Marital QTIP trust may also receive property directly from a Deceased Spouse's estate to be held of the benefit of the Surviving Spouse, even if there is no B Trust ever created.

The following are a summary of various typical planning options for married couples, taken from my client worksheets. You may find this information useful in helping you decide whether living trust planning is for you:

PLANNING OPTION: OUTRIGHT DISTRIBUTION TO SURVIVING SPOUSE

Description of Option: This option distributes the Deceased Spouse's separate property (if any) and one-half share of community property to the Surviving Spouse, outright and free of any trust restrictions.

NOTE: This option provides no tax planning or asset protection planning, which may cause your ultimate beneficiaries paying significant "Death Taxes" after you are both deceased if the total estate exceeds the Federal Estate Tax "Applicable Exclusion Amount" in the year of the Surviving Spouse's death, which is $5,430,000 in 2015, to be indexed for inflation in future years.

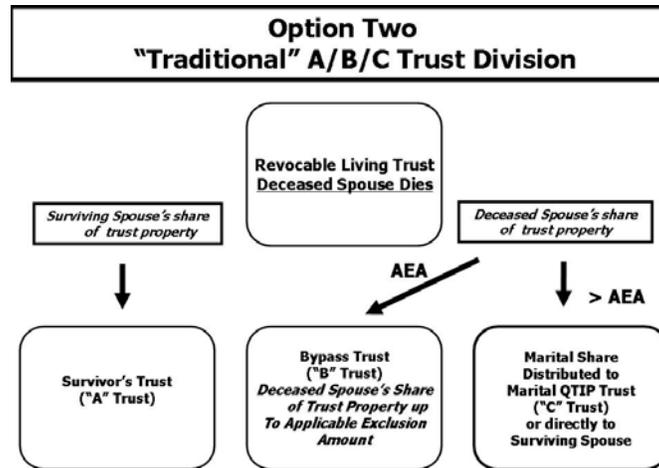

BRIEF SUMMARY OF PLANNING OPTION ONE:

- ✓ Outright distribution of deceased spouse's property to surviving spouse

- ✓ No estate tax planning
- ✓ No asset protection planning for spouse, children, or other heirs

PLANNING OPTION TWO: “TRADITIONAL” A/B/C TRUST DIVISION

Description of Option: This option requires the division of the trust property into separate shares on the Deceased Spouse’s death (see diagram below). It shelters as much of the trust property owned by the Deceased Spouse as possible from the Federal Estate Tax (the “Death Tax”) by using the Deceased Spouse’s Federal Estate Tax Applicable Exclusion Amount, or “AEA.” It also provides asset protection planning for the Deceased Spouse’s property that passes into trust for the benefit of the Surviving Spouse. The shares are described below.

THE SURVIVING SPOUSE’S SHARE

The Surviving Spouse’s Share of the trust property comprises the Surviving Spouse’s separate property (if any) owned by the trust, and the Surviving Spouse’s one-half interest in the community property owned by the marriage. This share will pass into a new trust called the “Survivor’s Trust” which is commonly known as the “A Trust” in popular usage.

The Survivor’s Trust is revocable (changeable) by the Surviving Spouse. The Surviving Spouse can do whatever he or she wishes with the Survivor’s Trust property, including changing the future beneficiaries of the property when the Surviving Spouse dies.

THE DECEASED SPOUSE’S SHARE

The Deceased Spouse’s Share of the trust property comprises the Deceased Spouse’s separate property (if any), and the Deceased Spouse’s one-half interest in the community property owned by the marriage. This share will pass into one or more new trusts, depending on the total value of the Deceased Spouse’s trust property at death.

For a Deceased Spouse’s estate that is less than the Federal Estate Tax “Applicable Exclusion Amount,” only one new trust is created, called the “Bypass Trust.” The Bypass Trust is commonly known as the “B Trust” in popular usage. The Bypass Trust can hold any amount of the Deceased Spouse’s property up to the Federal Estate Tax Applicable Exclusion Amount (“AEA”) that applies in the year of the Deceased Spouse’s death. Any property of the Deceased Spouse that is more than the Federal Estate Tax AEA will either pass outright to the Survivor’s Trust, or to a Marital QTIP Trust (“C Trust”) described below.

The Bypass Trust has the following features and benefits for the Surviving Spouse and, ultimately, your children or other heirs:

1. Irrevocable: The Bypass Trust is irrevocable (i.e. unchangeable);
2. HEMS Distributions and Asset Protection: The Surviving Spouse is typically the Trustee in charge of the Bypass Trust, making investment decisions and distribution decisions of income and, if needed, principal for his or her lifetime needs. The amount and timing of distributions are subject to standards, called “ascertainable standards” by the Internal Revenue Service. They should permit the Surviving Spouse to maintain the lifestyle enjoyed prior to the death of the Deceased Spouse, assuming there is sufficient income and assets to do so. Distributions are to be for the needs of the Surviving Spouse in the following categories (abbreviated as HEMS):

Health: Medical care and treatment, insurance premiums, vacations, etc.

Education: Training or retraining for a new or better job, etc.

Maintenance & Support: Food, clothing, shelter, recreation, vacation, etc.

The Bypass Trust can also provide for distributions to be made to or for the benefit of the descendants (i.e. children, grandchildren, etc.) of the Deceased Spouse);

If the Surviving Spouse wishes to have distributions made for reasons other than HEMS, then an Independent Trustee can be appointed by the Surviving Spouse to make those distributions. This Trustee will typically be an attorney, CPA, bank or trust company that has legal obligations to act impartially;

Because of limitations on distribution of property to the Surviving Spouse from the Bypass Trust and that the Surviving Spouse does not own the property in the Bypass Trust, the Bypass Trust provides a high level of asset protection for the Surviving Spouse’s inheritance from the Deceased Spouse;

3. For Federal Estate Tax, the property in the Bypass Trust is considered to have been inherited by the children or other heirs of the Deceased Spouse, but it is not distributed to them until the death of the Surviving Spouse. The Surviving Spouse does not own the Bypass Trust property, as the value of the Bypass Trust property, including any future growth, is not included as part of the estate of the Surviving Spouse for estate tax purposes at the death of the Surviving Spouse. This is why it is called the “Bypass Trust” – because it bypasses the taxable estate of the Surviving Spouse;
4. If desired, the Deceased Spouse can give the Surviving Spouse the ability to direct the ultimate distribution of the Bypass Trust property by granting a “Limited Power of Appointment” By using the “Limited Power of Appointment,” the Surviving Spouse can do additional estate planning with the Bypass Trust property, such as change the distribution plan for the property, or even create a new distribution plan to deal with an unexpected new situation such as a disabled child or grandchild.

For a Deceased Spouse’s estate that is greater than the Federal Estate Tax “Applicable Exclusion Amount,” in the year of the death of the Deceased Spouse, then the “extra” property (called the “Marital Share”) can either be given outright by being added to the Survivor’s Trust (“A Trust”), or placed into a special trust called a Marital QTIP Trust for the exclusive lifetime benefit of the Surviving Spouse. The Marital QTIP Trust is commonly called the “C Trust” in common usage.

If a Marital QTIP Trust is used, then this option will provide the maximum asset protection for the Surviving Spouse. If remarriage of the Surviving Spouse occurs, the Marital QTIP Trust will protect the Deceased Spouse's property for his or her heirs from a new spouse of the Surviving Spouse. Property in the Marital QTIP Trust will also enjoy "asset protection" status against creditors of the Surviving Spouse. The Marital QTIP Trust has the following features and benefits for the Surviving Spouse and, ultimately, your children or other heirs:

1. The Marital QTIP Trust is irrevocable (i.e. unchangeable);
2. Similar to the Bypass Trust, the Surviving Spouse can be the trustee of the Marital QTIP Trust. The Marital QTIP Trust provides for distributing income and, if needed, principal for the needs of the Surviving Spouse for the lifetime of the Surviving Spouse. Similar to the Bypass Trust, the amount and timing of distributions are subject to the HEMS distribution "ascertainable standards" described for the Bypass Trust above. Also like the Bypass Trust, an Independent Trustee can be appointed by the Surviving Spouse to make for reasons other than health, education, maintenance or support. This will provide asset protection for the property in the Marital QTIP Trust. However, distributions may not be made to or for the benefit of the descendants (i.e. children, grandchildren, etc.) of the Deceased Spouse);
3. If an IRS Form 706 (Estate Tax Return) is filed by the Surviving Spouse, the property in the Marital QTIP Trust is treated as owned by the Surviving Spouse, and the value of the Marital QTIP Trust is included as part of the estate of the Surviving Spouse at the death of the Surviving Spouse for Federal Estate Tax purposes. This will also mean that the Marital QTIP Trust property will receive a full "step up" in the capital gains cost basis as a result;
4. If desired, the Deceased Spouse can give the Surviving Spouse the ability to direct the ultimate distribution of the Marital QTIP Trust property by granting a "limited power of appointment." By using the "Limited Power of Appointment," the Surviving Spouse can do additional estate planning with the Bypass Trust property, such as change the distribution plan for the property, or even create a new distribution plan to deal with an unexpected new situation such as a disabled child or grandchild. The option to grant a Limited Power of Appointment is covered in Section Sixteen below.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF PLANNING OPTION TWO:

- ✓ Maximum asset protection in favor of the Surviving Spouse and children for the Deceased Spouse's property held in the Bypass Trust and the Marital QTIP Trust;
- ✓ If IRS Form 706 (Estate Tax Return) is filed by the surviving spouse, the property in the Marital QTIP Trust is includible in the Surviving Spouse's taxable estate, which also permits a full "step up" in the capital gains cost basis in the property;
- ✓ No flexibility for deciding whether the Bypass Trust is created (mandatory);
- ✓ When drafting, can decide whether the property of the Deceased Spouse that is greater than the Federal Estate Tax Exemption passes directly to the Survivor's Trust or to the Marital QTIP Trust;
- ✓ Option to grant a Limited Power of Appointment to surviving spouse (see Section Sixteen below) over Bypass Trust property and/or Marital QTIP Trust property.

PLANNING OPTION THREE: SPOUSAL OPTION TRUST DIVISION (DISCLAIMER)

Similar to the Planning Option Two “Traditional ABC Division described above,” but instead of requiring the division of the trust property into shares, this planning option leaves all of the Deceased Spouse’s property to the Surviving Spouse, either distributed to the Survivor’s Trust (“A Trust”) and/or a Marital QTIP Trust such as the “C Trust” described above. Then, the Surviving Spouse, after consultation with legal and tax counsel, decides whether to create a Bypass Trust by a written “disclaimer” of some or all of the Deceased Spouse’s property. The “disclaimer” causes the Deceased Spouse’s property disclaimed by the Surviving Spouse to pass into the Bypass Trust (see diagram). The disclaimer must be exercised in writing within nine (9) months of the Deceased Spouse’s death to be valid. This planning option provides maximum flexibility to the Surviving Spouse to decide whether to create a Bypass Trust at all. The Bypass Trust created in this option will function in the same way as the Bypass Trust in Planning Option Two.

IMPORTANT NOTE: Because the Bypass Trust in this Planning Option Three is created by exercising a disclaimer by the Surviving Spouse, it is treated as having been created with the Surviving Spouse’s own property. Because of this, there is no asset protection available for the property in the Bypass Trust against creditor claims against the Surviving Spouse.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF PLANNING OPTION THREE:

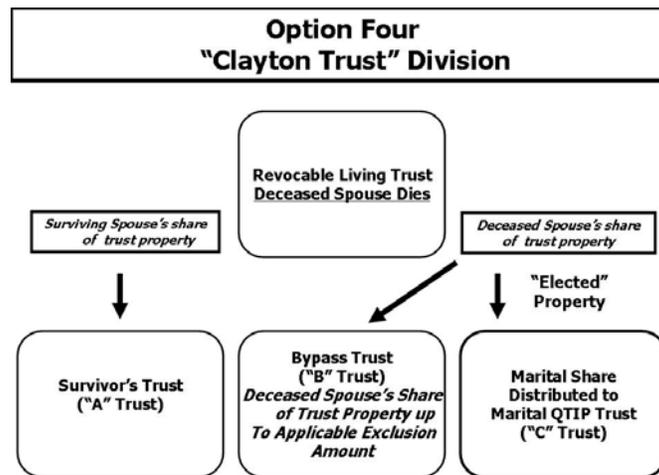

- ✓ No asset protection for the Deceased Spouse’s property that passes directly to the Surviving Spouse or into a Bypass Trust created by the Surviving Spouse’s disclaimer. However, asset protection is still available if some or all of the Deceased Spouse’s property passes into a Marital QTIP Trust for the benefit of the Surviving Spouse. As in Planning Option Two, the property in the Marital QTIP Trust is includible in the Surviving Spouse’s taxable estate, which also permits a full “step up” in the capital gains cost basis in the property, provided an IRS Form 706 is filed by the Surviving Spouse to claim that tax benefit;
- ✓ Maximum flexibility for deciding whether the Bypass Trust (“B Trust”) needs to be created, and how much of the Deceased Spouse’s property will be transferred into the Bypass Trust.
- ✓ Option to grant a Limited Power of Appointment to surviving spouse (see Section Sixteen below) over Marital QTIP Trust property (not available to Bypass Trust property because the Bypass Trust is created at the option of the Surviving Spouse).

PLANNING OPTION FOUR - “CLAYTON TRUST” DIVISION

The Clayton Trust Division option is similar to the Planning Option Two “Traditional ABC Division,” but instead of requiring the division of the trust property into shares, this planning option leaves all of the Deceased Spouse’s property to the Bypass Trust to be held in trust for the Surviving Spouse’s lifetime use and benefit.

However, if the Personal Representative (i.e. Executor) under the Pour-Over Will of the Deceased Spouse makes a “Clayton Election” over some or all of the Deceased Spouse’s property, then the elected property will instead pass into a Marital QTIP Trust for the benefit of the Surviving Spouse. This may be desirable for estate tax planning or other reasons, such as protecting the inheritance of the Deceased Spouse’s children.

This planning option provides no flexibility for the Surviving Spouse to decide whether to create and transfer property into a Marital QTIP Trust. That decision is made by the Deceased Spouse’s Personal Representative named in the Deceased Spouse’s Last Will and Testament. If it is created, the Bypass Trust and the Marital QTIP Trust function in the same way as the Bypass Trust and Marital QTIP Trust in Option Two. Property in both the Bypass Trust and the Marital QTIP Trust will enjoy “asset protection” status against the Surviving Spouse’s creditors.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF PLANNING OPTION FOUR:

Maximum asset protection for Deceased Spouse’s property that passes into any Bypass Trust or Marital QTIP Trust created whether the “election” is made, with some flexibility for deciding whether a Bypass Trust is created at all.

Portability of Unused Applicable Exclusion Amount for the Surviving Spouse

The “American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012,” or “ATRA” now provides that if a spouse dies and some or all of the Applicable Exclusion Amount (“AEA”) is not used at their death, it may be “saved up” for use by the Surviving Spouse’s estate on the death of the Surviving Spouse. This is called “portability,” and it can create some new planning opportunities for married couples.

Portability means that if the Deceased Spouse’s AEA is not used for the direct transfer of property to a non-citizen spouse, children or other heirs, or transfer into a Bypass Trust for the benefit of the Surviving Spouse, the unused portion may be claimed by the Surviving Spouse’s estate at the death of the Surviving Spouse.

As good as it may sound on paper, there are significant problems with portability:

1. First, to claim portability of the unused AEA at the death of the Surviving Spouse, it will be necessary for the Surviving Spouse to prepare and file an IRS Form 706 (Estate Tax Return) with the Internal Revenue Service. This is a requirement even if there are no estate taxes due because of the death of the Deceased Spouse. Failing to file this tax form will mean a permanent loss of the Deceased Spouse's AEA in the estate of the Surviving Spouse. Portability is not automatic, but requires taking specific legal action by the Surviving Spouse which, if not taken, causes the loss of this estate tax benefit;
2. Second, portability of a Deceased Spouse's unused AEA may only be claimed for the last Deceased Spouse of the Surviving Spouse. This means that if a Surviving Spouse files required paperwork and then remarries, portability of the unused AEA of the previous Deceased Spouse is lost when the Surviving Spouse dies.

However, for many Surviving Spouses, the larger AEA in effect now combined with the ability to file an estate tax return to claim portability of a Deceased Spouse's unused AEA suggests that they no longer must consider any estate planning, and need not consider using a Bypass Trust or any other trust to hold the property of a Deceased Spouse., if there is no estate problem, why complicate things? Wouldn't a simple living trust that just leaves everything to the Surviving Spouse solve the problem?

The next section discusses this issue, and explains why more complicated trust planning may still make sense in spite of portability.

Non-Tax Reasons to use a Bypass Trust Where Estate Taxes Are No Longer an Issue

Portability combined with the higher AEA now available will mean that most estates of married couples no longer must do Bypass Trust planning if the purpose of the planning is solely for estate tax planning purposes. However, as seen in this section, there are several non-tax reasons to continue to do Bypass Trust planning.

First, in states where there still is an inheritance tax (not the case in California), a Bypass Trust can still make sure that the inheritance tax does not hit the total estate on the death of the Surviving Spouse. However, Bypass Trust planning has a lot of features and benefits for the Surviving Spouse that have nothing to do with taxation of any kind. Here are some of the additional benefits of Bypass Trust planning:

Irrevocable

First, the Bypass Trust is an irrevocable trust, so it cannot be changed after it is created. The Surviving Spouse is typically given the right to receive lifetime income from the Bypass Trust, and principal as well if needed to maintain the Surviving Spouse's lifestyle. This can protect the Surviving Spouse and the ultimate beneficiaries of the Bypass Trust if the remarriage of the Surviving Spouse occurs, as the Bypass Trust assets will always be separate and distinct from the new marriage. This can prevent the Bypass Trust assets from being intentionally or accidentally left to a new spouse instead of to the Bypass Trust beneficiaries if the Surviving Spouse remarries. If the couple prohibits the distribution of principal from the Bypass Trust to the Surviving Spouse, the Bypass Trust principal will not be an available resource if the Surviving Spouse later must apply for Medi-Cal for long term care.

HEMS Distributions

Distributions from the Bypass Trust are limited to those needed for the Surviving Spouse's health, education, maintenance and support, which I abbreviate as "HEMS." In a well-drafted revocable living trust, the Bypass Trust may also grant the power to make distributions to the Surviving Spouse for any reason, and not just for the Surviving Spouse's needs for "HEMS." These distribution standards make sure that the Surviving Spouses is cared for without writing a blank check.

Asset Protection

The Deceased Spouse's property placed into the Bypass Trust can also be protected against creditors of the Surviving Spouse, which is another important feature of the Bypass Trust. Because the Surviving Spouse does not own the property in the Bypass Trust, and because of the HEMS distribution limits described above, it is very difficult for a creditor of the Surviving Spouse to take any of the property in the Bypass Trust. This can provide significant asset protection for the Surviving Spouse, especially if the Surviving Spouse is in a high-risk profession such as a doctor, lawyer, accountant, or architect.

Limited Power of Appointment for the Surviving Spouse Over Bypass Trust Assets

Even though the Bypass Trust is irrevocable, the ultimate beneficiaries of the Bypass Trust property might be changed at the death of the Surviving Spouse. This can happen if the Surviving Spouse is given a "limited power of appointment" to direct the distribution of the Bypass Trust property. A limited power of appointment can change the beneficiaries of the Bypass Trust, change the amount or percentage the beneficiaries will receive, or even change the way the property is passed on to the beneficiaries. What can be changed depends on the actual grant of power given to the Surviving Spouse by the Deceased Spouse.

This important potential power is useful for doing additional estate planning to reflect changed family circumstances.

How Inheritances Are Lost - Planning for Your Children's Inheritance

Traditional estate planning in the past focused on avoiding Probate and Conservatorship, and minimizing or eliminating the Death Tax. However, little or no attention was paid to planning for the safe passage of assets on to the next and subsequent generations of heirs without them being lost through several reasons.

There is a proverb from Asia that roughly translates as, "from rice paddy to rice paddy in three generations." This means that the first generation of a family, many times poorly educated but hard working and driven by strong cultural values, often has built a family fortune to pass on to the next generation.

Here in Santa Clara County (the "Silicon Valley") where I practice law, this can be seen in the many family businesses and fortunes built by the first members of a family to move into the valley, often from other parts of the country or the world. Orchards, farms, restaurants, department stores, wineries, convenience and grocery stores, and many other businesses fit this pattern. It can also be seen in the many success stories of immigrants and others achieving financial success in the tech industry.

The second generation here in the Silicon Valley is often better educated, with the education paid for from the family fortune built by the first generation. This generation may still have many of the values of the first generation, and may also have an interest in continuing the family business, building further wealth.

The third generation, however, is often still better educated than the previous generation, and has likely been raised entirely in the new culture. This generation often has no interest in the family business, which can lead to the family business and wealth being lost due to lack of interest. Even if the third generation is interested, there are several forces conspiring together to destroy the wealth of the family.

Through stories in this section, I will discuss how families and their heirs lose inheritances. Finally, I will discuss how, with proper planning, a family can work together to guarantee, as much as possible, that the family wealth will not be lost.

Bill's Story

Bill had been in financial difficulty his whole life. He had maxed out his credit cards, was late on his rent, and already had several judgments against him for unpaid bills. His wages at work were being garnished by various creditors. At age 30, his prospects were bleak.

Then Bill's parents died, leaving him everything they owned, including their house. Unfortunately, their property was left outright to Bill. Bill's creditors took all of the cash, and soon, because Bill had never learned how to handle his finances, he lost the house to foreclosure. Forty years of hard work and sacrifice by his parents was gone in less than two years, at the end of which Bill was still in debt, and had nothing left from his parents. Had only someone been able to take care of Bill's inheritance for him.

Ruth's Story

When Ruth's parents died, they left her a nice inheritance. Unfortunately, four years later, Ruth was in a car accident that incapacitated her, leaving her in a wheelchair. Ruth now needed 24-hour care due to her injuries. Because Ruth had property, she was forced to use all of her property to pay for her care, including her inheritance from her parents. Not only was her property lost paying for her care, but her inheritance from her parents was lost. Ruth is now trying to survive solely on government assistance. She hopes that the government will be there for her, but she is uncertain.

Marisa's Story

Marisa had been happily married to Jim for ten years, and had two wonderful children. Two years ago, Marisa's mother Jane died, leaving her home and investments totaling over $800,000. The house was sold and the investments were liquidated, converting everything into cash. When the check arrived from her mother's lawyer for her inheritance, Marisa put the check into the joint account she held with her husband. Five years later, Marisa died, and everything they owned together, including Marisa's inheritance, went to Jim. Jim then remarried, started a new family, and left everything to his new wife and new child, with nothing going to Marisa's children. Had only her mother left Marisa's inheritance in another way.

John's Story

John had started his furniture store with high hopes. He had sunk everything he owned into the fixtures, inventory, lease, etc. So, when he ran out of money and his business failed, all of his vendors and other creditors came after him for payment. He was forced to file for personal bankruptcy, facing the loss of almost everything he owned. Unfortunately, his troubles were just beginning. To add insult to injury, one month after he filed for bankruptcy, his father died, leaving him an inheritance of $500,000. Because he was in bankruptcy the court-appointed bankruptcy trustee seized his inheritance, and used it to pay John's creditors. When the bankruptcy trustee was done, John was out of bankruptcy, but there was only $50,000 of his inheritance left. The rest had gone to his creditors. Could something have been done differently by John's father?

Janet's Story

Janet's parents died, leaving her about $500,000 she promptly invested in a diversified portfolio of stock, bonds, and mutual funds. A few years later, Janet was out driving near the farmer's market at her local mall when she lost control of her car and drove right through a crowd of people waiting in line for kettle corn.

Although nobody was killed and it was ruled an accident by the police, Janet ended up seriously injuring 10 people. The resulting lawsuits against her for negligence ended up in judgments against her that were more than her automobile and homeowners' insurance. The resulting collection efforts by her judgment creditors took nearly everything that Janet owned, including the $500,000 inherited from her parents. Could the accidental loss of Janet's inheritance have been avoided?

Mike's Story

Mike lost his parents when he was 16 years old. He went to live with his aunt and uncle, who were also given control of the property left to Mike by his parents, which totaled over $300,000.

Unfortunately, when Mike turned 18 years of age, he demanded his inheritance from his aunt and uncle, who were obligated by law to turn the $300,000 over to Mike. Because Mike had no experience handling money, he spent his inheritance like there was no tomorrow. He dropped out of high school, bought a sports car, partied with his friends, and ran through his entire inheritance within two years.

Instead of using the money to finish high school and go on to college or to start a business, at the end of two years, Mike had no money left, and he was reduced to working at a minimum wage job just to put food on the table. If only someone else could have handled his inheritance for him until he was educated and knew more about money.

The Common Thread

All of the children in the stories related above shared the following in common – they all lost their inheritances because they received their inheritance outright from their parents.

Is there an alternative that can protect a child's inheritance from being lost in one of these ways? Yes. I call it the “Castle Trust Planning Option.”

Protecting an Inheritance With The Castle Trust Planning Option

The Castle Trust Planning Option protects your children's or other heir's inheritance by passing the inheritance in trust instead of outright to them. It can be appropriate whether you are married or unmarried. The Castle Trust Planning Option has the following benefits:

- ✓ Your children or other heirs have the use and benefit of the property held in trust, and the Trustee of the trust may use as much of the income and other property in the trust necessary for their needs in the areas of health, education, maintenance and support;
- ✓ Your children or other heirs do not own the property – it is owned by the trust, which is an irrevocable trust;
- ✓ The lack of ownership of the inheritance by your children or other heirs provides a high level of asset protection for their inheritance. Because the inheritance is not owned, it is almost impossible for the beneficiaries to lose it in a divorce, a lawsuit, bankruptcy, or through mismanagement;
- ✓ When properly structured, this planning option can also pass on the children's or other heirs' inheritance to their own children or other heirs, with the same asset protection as before; and
- ✓ Finally, property passed on in this way using your Death Tax AEA can then be passed on to your children's or other heir's descendants for possibly several generations free from the Death Tax! Imagine passing on several hundred thousand dollars that can grow for several years without being touched by the Death Tax system. This is one of the major benefits of the Castle Trust Planning Option. The Castle Trust Planning Option is the sensible alternative to leaving an inheritance outright to a child or other heir.

The Children's Legacy Plan: Planning for Your Minor Children's Care

If you are a parent with minor children (i.e. under the age of 18 years), then there is an important question to ask yourself:

If you went out to dinner tonight and didn't come home, what would happen to your children?

It's a hard question, but, without proper planning, your children could end up in the county "foster care" system.

Even police and social workers who work in the foster care system will admit that it is overcrowded, underfunded, and "broken." Most will work hard to avoid taking your children into custody and putting them into foster care. However, for them to do that, they need to be assured that your children will not be at risk if they are left in the care and custody of other adults until the Probate Court can appoint one or more guardians for your children.

Your children could end up with relatives you would want to raise them, or could end up with relatives you would not want to raise them. Or, with proper planning, they could end up with friends that share your values and beliefs.

The Children's Legacy Plan:

1. Helps to keep your minor children out of foster care if something happens to you;
2. Provides for Temporary Caretakers or "First Responders" that can temporarily take custody of and care for your minor children until Permanent Guardians can be appointed by the Probate Court;
3. Nominates Permanent Guardians for your children to give the Probate Court guidance on your wishes;
4. Confidentially identifies those family members you want not want to serve a guardians for your children. This can be for emotional, physical or sexual abuse, drug or alcohol problems, poor financial habits, history of mental illness, history of criminal behavior, etc.
5. Provides a medical power-of-attorney for each of your minor children so someone you trust can make medical and health care decisions for them if you are not available or unable to do so;
6. Provides written instructions for each of your children's caregivers such as their daycare, pre-school, elementary or high school, etc., so they know who to call and what to do if they find out that something has happened to you;
7. Provides written instructions and guidance for the guardians of your children, letting them know how you wish for your children to be raised, what activities you want them to be involved in, and who the people are in their lives you wish to continue in their lives, including any restrictions on contact with those people;

The Children's Legacy Plan provides for all, at an affordable cost that will provide "peace of mind" for you and your children.

The Children's Legacy Plan is especially important to consider if your family lives in other states or even other countries. It helps to have one or more local friends who could temporarily care for your children until family can arrive to start the Guardianship process in the Probate Court. This can keep your children out of the foster care system.

Hire an Experienced Estate Planning Attorney

By this time, hopefully you have concluded that estate planning is not something that you try to do yourself. Trying to do your own estate planning is like trying to operate on yourself if you need surgery, or trying to fix the problems with your modern car engine with all of its computerized functions --- you will likely end up with a worse problem than when you started, and may have been better off doing nothing at all!

Estate planning is both an art and a science. To do it well involves hundreds of hours of study, and hundreds of hours of continuing education every year. There is no such thing as a “simple” estate, despite what the “Legalzooms” or “Suze Ormans” of the world may imply. Proper estate planning requires an experienced practitioner who can not only answer your questions, but also knows what questions must be asked.

Three Step Estate Planning Process

Step One - Initial Consultation: At this meeting we discuss your desires, concerns and goals for your family. We also discuss tax avoidance strategies, disability planning, and the levels of estate planning and the fees and costs involved in their implementation.

To provide me with the information I need to properly advise you about your estate planning, including probate and estate tax issues, I have you complete a few worksheets to bring with you to the Initial Consultation. If you are married or in a registered domestic partnership, or if you are unmarried and you and your partner wish to coordinate your planning, an additional consent form must be signed before the consultation can be commenced.

Please bring any existing wills, trusts or other estate planning documents and a current photo of you and your family members I can scan and copy for your file. I also ask that you bring originals or copies of recent statements for all bank, brokerage and retirement accounts, with any life insurance policy statements, LLC or Partnership Agreements and, if available, the deeds and current property tax statements for any real estate you own. Having this information available will make your Initial Consultation more valuable, because I can better advise you of your planning options. Without this information, my ability to advise you will be severely limited.

Engagement Letter: At the end of the Initial Consultation, should you engage me to prepare your estate plan, you will execute an Engagement Letter with me and will be provided with a homework binder to complete and bring with you to your Plan Design Meeting. I can also provide the paperwork in an electronic form that can be completed as Microsoft Word "forms."

I will also take a deposit from you which will be one-half of the anticipated fixed fees for preparing your estate plan. The Plan Design Meeting is scheduled for a date about two weeks after your Initial Consultation, but you also have the option of scheduling it through my online calendaring system when you are ready to proceed.

Step Two - Plan Design Meeting: At your Plan Design Meeting we will go over your homework binder, confirming your choices and answering your new questions that came up as you went through your binder. In this meeting, I work like an architect, creating a “blueprint” for your estate plan that reflects your wishes and desires. All planning decisions will be confirmed or made in this Plan Design Meeting.

Some of the decisions made in the Plan Design Meeting include:

1. Who will be guardians for minor children;
2. Who will be Successor Trustees for your living trust and Financial Agents to handle other financial matters under your general durable power of attorney;

(408) 247-0444 / www.lawbob.com / www.lawbob.net/ ©2010-2015, Robert P. Bergman – August 2015 Edition)

3. Who will be your Health Care Agents to make medical and health care decisions for you if you become incapacitated;
4. How your property is to be held and distributed to care for you while you alive, and how it is to be distributed after your death;
5. Any special distribution instructions for your property, such as an outright distribution, structured distribution, special needs distribution, or Castle Trust Planning Option; etc.

Step Three - Signing Appointment: Having 95% or more of an estate plan in place soon is better than a 100% perfect estate plan that never gets signed and implemented!

After completion of the Plan Design Meeting, a Signing Appointment will then be scheduled one to two weeks after the Plan Design Meeting, where you will come in to sign your estate plan. The balance of the fee and any costs will be due then.

You will then have 60 days from signing to have anything that you wish to change be corrected in your plan, such as misspelled names or changing the order of successor trustees or other people you have named to care of you and/or your property.

Estate Planning Options

Planning for the orderly distribution of the family's wealth is complicated. I offer several levels of planning designed to serve the needs of a wide range of families. The level of customization for planning will be different depending on the level of planning selected.

Foundational estate planning involves the preparation of a revocable living trust with several additional legal documents such as special Wills called "Pour-over Wills," Advance Health Care Directives, and Durable Powers-of-Attorney. Foundational estate planning avoids Conservatorship, avoid Probate, and provide for the orderly distribution of family wealth from one generation to the next. Foundational estate planning may also include tax planning for the Federal Estate Tax and asset protecting planning for the inheritance to be passed to a spouse, partner, children or other heirs.

Advanced estate planning techniques do things such as provide for income tax and estate tax free inheritance for heirs, provide asset protection for retirement plans passed on to the next generation, and special planning for special needs children and adults.

All foundational and advanced estate plans are prepared personally by me based on your wishes and concerns. I do not use document preparation services or other staff.

The Living Trust Plan

The Living Trust Plan accomplishes some or all of the following goals:

1. Avoid Conservatorship while you are alive through using comprehensive custom drafted legal documents such as the Living Trust Agreement, General Durable Power of Attorney, and Advance Health Care Directive;
2. Avoid Probate at your death through the Living Trust Agreement and your Pour-Over Will);
3. Provide asset protection planning for any inheritance received by a Surviving Spouse or partner through the Living Trust Agreement;
4. Provide asset protection planning for any inheritance received by children or other heirs through the Living Trust Agreement;

(408) 247-0444 / www.lawbob.com / www.lawbob.net/ ©2010-2015, Robert P. Bergman – August 2015 Edition)

5. Pass on property protected from the federal estate tax for two or more generations through the Living Trust Agreement;
6. If married, can permit planning to minimize or eliminate the impact of the federal estate tax through the Living Trust Agreement;
7. Plan for many family situations through the Living Trust Agreement, such as:
 - ✓ Second marriage
 - ✓ Substantial separate property assets in a marriage
 - ✓ Children from a prior marriage or relationship
 - ✓ Special needs children or other beneficiaries
 - ✓ Non-citizen spouses, beneficiaries or proposed trustees
 - ✓ Guardians for minor children

ASSET PROTECTION PLANNING: Providing asset protection planning for a Surviving Spouse, partner, children or other heirs can be especially important if a person has any of the following problems or issues:

- Heir is too young or financially immature
- Heir has a drug, alcohol or gambling abuse problem
- Heir is in a bad marriage
- Heir has lawsuits or judgments against them, or is in bankruptcy
- Heir is a special needs person, relying on government assistance for shelter, income, custodial medical care, or medical insurance
- Heir dies without doing estate planning
- Heir goes through a divorce without planning for their received inheritance
- Heir is in a high risk profession or occupation such as law, medicine, accountancy, etc.

What is Included in a Living Trust Plan

DOCUMENTS AND PLANNING OPTIONS	INCLUDED IN PLAN?
Custom Drafted Living Trust Agreement	Yes
Estate tax planning	Yes (married couples)
Planning for a non-citizen spouse	Yes
Planning for a special needs person (can also be done separately)	Yes
Asset protection planning for Surviving Spouse or partner	Yes
Castle Trust Planning (Asset protection) for children or other heirs	Yes
Nominating guardians for your minor children for each client	Yes
Pour-Over Will for each client	Yes
Custom Drafted Durable Power of Attorney for each client	Yes
Custom Drafted Advance Health Care Directive for each client	Yes

HIPAA Authorization for each client	Yes
Assignment of Personal Property for each client	Yes
Certification of Trust	Yes
Personal Property Memorandum	Yes
Documents to self-maintain some parts of Living Trust Plan	Yes

The Children’s Legacy Plan Revisited

As noted previously in this brochure, the Children’s Legacy Plan can assure as much as possible that your minor children will never spend a minute in foster care. You will provide detailed instructions regarding every phase of your children’s lives to the people that will care for your children. Using a unique combination of legal and non-legal documents, you can provide for the short-term, temporary care of your children if you become incapacitated or die, and provide for the long-term care of your children until they reach adulthood.

DOCUMENTS AND PLANNING OPTIONS	INCLUDED IN PLAN?
Nomination of Temporary Caretakers	Yes
Nomination of Permanent Guardians	Yes
Confidential Exclusion of Guardians	Yes
Instructions to Caretakers	Yes
Instructions to Guardians	Yes
Medical Power of Attorney for Minor Children	Yes

The Nomination of Temporary Caretakers identifies those persons you are confident could temporarily care for your minor children until court action has been taken to appoint a temporary and/or permanent Guardian for your children.

The Nomination of Permanent Guardians identifies those persons you are requesting be appointed by the Court to care for and raise your children.

The Confidential Exclusion of Guardians identifies those persons you would not want to be appointed by the Court as Guardians for your children, because it contains reasons these persons are to be excluded.

The Instructions to Caretakers and Instructions to Guardians are forms provided as part of the plan for you to complete and give to those people caring for your children (e.g. day care, preschool, school, babysitters, etc.), and a format to give instructions to your proposed Guardians on how you wish for your children to be raised.

The Medical Power of Attorney grants authority to persons to make medical and health care decisions for your children if you are unavailable to make those decisions yourself. It is not a substitute for a permanent guardianship, but can handle temporary situations and also that time period covered by the Nomination of Temporary Caretakers described above.

The Charitable Remainder Trust

Ask yourself the following questions:

- ✓ Do you own a highly-appreciated asset such as a rental property or stock portfolio?
- ✓ Does that asset not generate as much income as you would like?
- ✓ Would you like to sell that asset and reinvest the proceeds triggering no capital gains tax?
- ✓ Would you like to create a stream of income from the new investments for several years, or even for the rest of your life?
- ✓ Would you like to reduce your estate taxes as well when you make the sale of this highly-appreciated asset?
- ✓ Would you like to benefit charity and receive a charitable income tax deduction as well?

If you can answer “yes” to one or more of the questions above, then a Charitable Remainder Trust (“CRT”) may be of benefit to you.

The CRT is a special irrevocable (i.e. unchangeable) trust can accomplish all of the goals contemplated by the questions above. Essentially what happens is this:

1. A CRT is created by the owner of the highly-appreciated asset;
2. The CRT provides for income to the owner of the highly-appreciated asset either for a period of years (up to 20), or for life, making the owner the “income beneficiary;”
3. One or more charities (known as the “remainder beneficiaries”) are designated to receive the property remaining in the CRT after the death of the income beneficiary or the expiration of the time designated in the CRT;
4. The highly-appreciated asset, such as a rental property, is transferred to the ownership of the CRT by the original owner;
5. The Trustee (i.e. person in charge) of the CRT then sells the asset, and, because the CRT has one or more charities as the remainder beneficiaries, there is no taxable capital gain due to the sale;
6. The Trustee then reinvests all of the proceeds from the sale, and pays an annual income to the income beneficiary either for a period of years or life, depending on what the CRT says;
7. The income beneficiary/original owner will receive an immediate charitable deduction for income tax purposes, which is the present value of the future gift that the charities will receive on the death of the owner or expiration date of the CRT. The deduction is based on the income payout from the CRT, and whether the payout is for a term of years or the life expectancy of the income beneficiary, and can be taken against up to 50% of adjusted gross income;
8. At the death of the income beneficiary (or upon expiration of the term of years), the charities receive whatever is left in the CRT; and
9. The value of the asset in the CRT, including any appreciation over time, is not part of the estate of the original owner of the asset, reducing the taxable estate for calculation of the Death Tax.

The CRAT (Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust)

- ✓ Donor makes a one-time gift of property to irrevocable trust with a charitable organization as beneficiary;
- ✓ Donor receives an annual distribution equal to at least 5% of the initial net market value of the CRAT assets; and

- ✓ Donor receives the annual distribution for a period of time, either for lifetime or a fixed period not exceeding 20 years, with the remainder of the trust paid to the charity on the Donor's death.

The CRUT (Charitable Remainder Unitrust)

- ✓ Donor makes a gift of property to irrevocable trust with a charitable organization as beneficiary. Multiple gifts can be found to the same CRUT;
- ✓ Donor receives an annual fixed percentage distribution equal to at least 5% of the yearly net market value of the trust assets; and
- ✓ Donor receives the annual distribution for a period of time, either for lifetime or a fixed period not exceeding 20 years, with the remainder of the trust paid to the charity on the Donor's death.

The NIMCRUT (Net Income CRUT with “make up” provisions)

- ✓ Donor makes one or more gifts of property to irrevocable trust with a charitable organization as beneficiary. Multiple gifts can be made to the same NIMCRUT;
- ✓ Donor receives income from the NIMCRUT up to an annual fixed percentage equal to at least 5% of the yearly net market value of the trust assets. If trust income cannot pay out the full fixed percentage in any year, the trust may “make up” the deficiency in future years when the trust income is higher; and
- ✓ Donor receives the annual distribution for a period of time, either for lifetime or a fixed period not exceeding 20 years, with the remainder of the trust paid to the charity on the Donor's death.

IMPORTANT NOTE: Using a CRT can be powerful if the Donor is also insurable. Because of the charitable deduction available to the Donor for the gift to the CRT, a useful strategy is to use some of the income from the CRT and/or the income tax savings due to the charitable deduction to pay the premiums for a life insurance policy held in an Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust, or “ILIT” (see below) The life insurance can be passed on income and estate tax free to the Donor's heirs, and can replace the value of the property transferred to the CRT.

The “Wealth Preservation Trust (Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust or “ILIT”)

Life insurance owned by you when you die is part of your taxable estate for Death Tax. This means that a large insurance policy you own could create a Death Tax problem for you if the total value of your estate is then above the AEA in the year you die ($5,430,000 in 2015). In such a case, the life insurance proceeds will be taxed at a flat rate of 40% of the excess amount.

However, if the life insurance was properly transferred to an Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust, or “ILIT” prior to your death, the entire value of the insurance would be removed from your Death Tax estate! This could save hundreds of thousands of dollars for your family.

An additional benefit of using an ILIT is that the proceeds of the life insurance can be removed from your estate and made no longer available to pay creditors' claims of your estate when you die.

An ILIT has the following characteristics:

- ✓ Established to own one or more policies of life insurance on the life of the Trustor/Grantor (i.e., the person who created the ILIT), with the ILIT as the beneficiary of the life insurance;
- ✓ Cash gifts are made by the Grantor to the Trustee of the ILIT (who is not the Grantor). Gifts under the annual gift tax exclusion (i.e., $14,000 per person per year in 2014) are not taxable to the Grantor, and also reduce the Grantor's taxable estate for Death Tax purposes;

- ✓ If properly drafted, funded, and administered by the Grantor and the Trustee over the years, life insurance proceeds will be paid to or for the benefit of the heirs free from state and federal income tax, and free from inheritance taxes in those states that have them and the federal estate tax (the “Death Tax”); and
- ✓ When the insurance proceeds are paid to the Trustee of the ILIT, they can loan money to the estate of the Grantor, or purchase assets of the Grantor’s estate to provide for immediate cash that may be needed to pay creditors, funeral expenses, income taxes, inheritance taxes or Death Taxes.

ILITS can accomplish:

- ✓ To provide for liquidity in a decedent’s estate, especially where the estate has many illiquid assets such as real estate, a family business, or a stock, bond or mutual fund portfolio that the heirs do not wish to be forced to sell;
- ✓ In a second marriage situation, to provide a fund to pay an inheritance to the Deceased Spouse’s children while leaving other property directly to or for the benefit of the Surviving Spouse. This can avoid long-term animosity or conflict between the Deceased Spouse’s children who are the stepchildren of the Surviving Spouse, and can also assure that the Deceased Spouse’s children are not accidentally or inadvertently disinherited by their stepparent (the Surviving Spouse);
- ✓ To remove life insurance death benefits from the taxable estate of the owner of the life insurance policy when the insured person dies, providing estate tax savings up to 55% of the value of the life insurance in taxes that are no longer owed and do not have to be paid; and
- ✓ To provide an inheritance for a spouse, partner and/or children that also has the asset protection benefits of the Castle Trust Planning Option discussed above.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The ILIT works especially well when used with a Charitable Remainder Trust, described above. Cash flow from the CRT can make gifts to the ILIT used to pay the premiums on the life insurance. The charitable deduction available with the CRT means that potentially some or all of the gifts made to the ILIT are made with “free” dollars, because the charitable deduction may completely offset the income coming out of the ILIT for several years.

The Supplemental Needs Trust for Special Needs Children and Others

Children and others who are disabled are especially vulnerable, and special planning must be pursued for them because of their special needs. A Supplemental Needs Trust (SNT) makes provision for a special needs person without jeopardizing their present or future government benefits, and supplements those benefits to provide a higher level of care and quality of life that the government cannot provide.

This brochure does not cover the particulars of SNT planning, but below is a brief list of costly mistakes that parents can make when planning for their special needs child or other person. A more detailed article describing these mistakes (and others) in more detail, with solutions, can be obtained by calling my office at (408) 247-0444 or visiting www.lawbob.com where the article can be downloaded at no charge.

MISTAKE #1: Disinheriting the child.

MISTAKE #2: Procrastination.

MISTAKE #3: Failure to coordinate a planning team effort.

MISTAKE #4: Ignoring the child’s special needs when planning for the child’s benefit.

MISTAKE #5: Creating a “generic” special needs trust that doesn’t fit the child.

MISTAKE #6: Failure to properly “fund” and maintain the plan.

MISTAKE #7: Choosing the wrong trustee.

MISTAKE #8: Failing to invite contributions from others to the trust.

MISTAKE #9: Relying on siblings of your special needs child to use their money for your special needs child's benefit.

MISTAKE #10: Failing to protect the special needs child from predators.

A separate Supplemental Needs Trust should be considered for your child with special needs. It can be funded while you are still alive, can accept contributions from family members and friends, and can be the beneficiary of your estate, proceeds from life insurance distributed from an ILIT, or even the beneficiary of a retirement plan (if planned inside an Retirement Plan Trust).

The Retirement Plan Trust: Estate Planning for Retirement Plan Assets

Important Note Regarding Special Estate Planning for Retirement Plan Assets: Making the proper beneficiary designations for retirement plans involves many complex tax and individual family issues. Designating beneficiaries on retirement assets such as IRAs, 401k plans, 403b plans, 457 plans, and pension plans has many serious legal and tax implications.

Estate plans that only use a revocable living trust to transfer assets do not specifically address the complicated issues involving retirement plans. Under current law, however, the distribution out of retirement plans after your death can be extended or “stretched” for several years, potentially preserving more of the retirement plan assets for your heirs. Designating your revocable living trust as the primary or secondary beneficiary of such retirement plans will often result in losing significant tax benefits, and will often require that such plans be distributed out in as little as five years.

With proper planning, a retirement plan can be passed on to children or other heirs in an asset-protected form such as the Castle Trust Planning Option described above. With the power of tax-free, compounded growth for the retirement plan assets, even a modest retirement plan of $150,000 to $200,000 could be worth millions of dollars to your heirs over time, in a form of ownership known as an “inherited IRA.”

To provide the asset protection of the Castle Trust Planning Option, and the tax-free growth of an inherited IRA, I provide an estate planning trust called the “Retirement Plan Trust.” The Retirement Plan Trust assures as much as legally possible that a child's inherited IRA will not be subject to creditors' claims, bankruptcy, or loss due to death or divorce.

The Retirement Plan Trust is a complex, advanced estate planning tool. Because of its complexity and the tremendous financial and asset protection benefits of this planning for retirement plan assets, my fees are higher for this additional planning.

Retirement Plan Trust planning includes:

1. A completely-customized Retirement Plan Trust for you and your spouse or partner;
2. Specially drafted Beneficiary Designation letters;
3. An “Owner's Manual” for the Retirement Plan Trust, that includes the following:
 - a. An Retirement Plan Trust Flow Chart;
 - b. Certification of Trust;
 - c. Operating Procedures Checklist;
 - d. Personal Directions;
 - e. A Statement Organizer, and

- f. A Review Checklist.
- 4. Asset protection for your heirs' inheritance; and
- 5. A free consultation for your successor trustee after your death.

If you wish to obtain more detailed information about the Retirement Plan Trust, I urge you to attend one of my public seminars, which will also entitle you to receive a discount off my usual fees. Conditions apply to receive the discount. Visit my website at www.lawbob.com for information about upcoming Retirement Plan Trust seminars.

Public and Private Living Trust Seminars

As part of my ongoing effort to educate and inspire the public to take action and do comprehensive estate planning for their families, I offer regular free seminars and workshops for the general public, companies, nonprofits and government agencies. I also offer free seminars for churches, parents' groups, civic organizations, and even extended families who wish to find out more about planning for their family's future.

Public Seminars: To attend a public seminar on living trusts, please visit my website at www.lawbob.com, where you can see the dates and times of upcoming seminars, and also make a reservation through the website. My living trust seminars are held 2 to 3 times a month on Saturday mornings at my office, and occasionally at other times. Other seminars on advanced planning options such as the ILIT, the CRT, and the Retirement Plan Trust may be added from time to time. Check my website at www.lawbob.com for details and to register.

Private Seminars: I am also available to come to your company, parents' group, preschool, school, daycare center, church, synagogue, association, or community group to give a private living trust seminar. Just call my office at (408) 247-0444, or email to rpb@lawbob.com, and I will get back to you to schedule your private estate planning seminar. I provide all of the handout materials and equipment (laptop, projector and screen), and you provide the location.

Schedule Your Consultation Today

Scheduling your Initial Consultation with me is as easy as picking up your telephone and calling (408) 247-0444, or visiting www.lawbob.com and following the links to my scheduling pages. Several appointment time slots are available each week on weekdays and on Saturdays, and I try to accommodate your needs as much as my schedule permits. You may also use this link: Schedule Consultation.

Limited consultations may be available in homes, hospitals, or care facilities. However, due to the increased time and expense of providing estate planning services in such circumstances, including the necessity for multiple trips, consultations will be billed at my current hourly rate for consultation time, and 50% of my usual hourly rate for travel time to and from my office to the location. Hourly fees are subject to change without notice, and fees for these special consultations are not credited towards the cost of any estate plan I am engaged to prepare. There may be a premium of up to 100% of my usual fixed fees for estate planning depending on how quickly I am required to create and execute the estate plan.

I hope this brochure has been useful for you, and that you are encouraged to take action today to have your estate plan prepared. Thank you for your interest.

About Robert P. Bergman Estate Planning Attorney and Counselor

"Planning for Your Most Important Asset...Your Family!"

Robert P. "Bob" Bergman is an estate planning attorney and counselor who focuses his practice on foundational estate planning, including the use of custom-drafted wills, revocable living trusts, advance health care directives, and powers-of-attorney. He is a Certified Specialist in Estate Planning, Trust & Probate Law (California State Bar Board of Legal Specialization)

Bob prepares more advanced estate planning tools such as life insurance trusts for asset protection and estate tax planning, charitable remainder trusts, special needs and supplemental needs trusts for special needs persons, and the Retirement Plan Trust (designed to provide asset protection and maximum tax advantages for an inherited IRA for children or other heirs). He also prepares special legal documents for families with minor children to keep them out of the foster care system.

Bob's detailed approach to the planning process assures that he implements his clients' wishes and desires in the estate plans that he prepares. In practice since 1981, Bob leaves nothing to chance.
