

How your GP can help you control your personal and confidential information

- The diagram below shows some of the potential flows of your confidential and identifiable information, without your express consent, within the NHS
- You can contact your surgery and request that your GP adds any or all relevant Read codes (electronic “flags”), 9Nu0/9Nu4/9Ndo/9Nd1, to your GP records to prevent your data being processed in a particular way (i.e. you can “opt-out” of these types of data sharing)
- Your GP will only add these flags at your request
- The Read codes have no function other than to tell software systems not to extract and/or send your data
- Any opt-out can be easily reversed (i.e. you can opt back in) at any time should you change your mind
- Make sure you understand what you are opting out of - follow the links, or see www.nhsdatasharing.info

The 9Nu0, the 9Nu4, the 9Ndo, or the 9Nd1 code will not:

- Have any effect on the medical care that you are entitled to receive from your GP surgery or from anywhere else within the NHS or private sector
- Have any effect on your GP surgery, or any hospital, and the way that they are paid by the NHS, or any effect on the services that they provide
- Have any effect on your prescriptions, vaccinations, screening procedures, investigations, monitoring of chronic conditions or referrals to specialists
- Prevent your GP from either referring you to a specialist under Choose & Book or managing your prescriptions via the Electronic Prescription Service
- Prevent you from requesting your prescriptions online, emailing your GP or surgery, or accessing your medical records securely online (if available to you)
- Prevent your GP from sharing your data within the NHS, where appropriate, for the purposes of your direct medical care

Primary uses of your personal identifiable information
(provision of direct medical care to healthcare professionals)

Secondary uses of your personal identifiable information
(unrelated to your direct medical care)
