The founder of Home and Kids on creating the seriously stylish industrial vintage look

Our obsession with vintage looks like it's here to stay. The more masculine industrial look is the one to try for those of you who can't commit to floral chintz. The look often incorporates metal, stone and wood and looks fantastic in both traditional and contemporary settings.

A table made of reclaimed wood coupled with metal chairs makes a great impact in the kitchen or dining room, while being incredibly practical. The table pictured here is from Vintage Industrial Furniture, priced from $599. Simple, mismatched chairs work well, as do Tolix chairs from Pedlars or Lovely & Company from $275 (made.com do some great reproductions from £109 per pair, below right).

The best bit about this look is that nothing need be perfect. Using items for a purpose other than that intended is an easy and fun way to create the look: tin cans for plant pots; trunks for coffee tables; vegetable crates like these by Ahanti (right, $35 from Home and Kids) for storing just about anything...

White painted floorboards and exposed brickwork create the perfect backdrop, simple light fittings such as the Scandinavian designed Diamond Lights from Home and Kids (£70, top right) are just the ticket. John Lewis stocks Anglepoise desk lamps (from £110, top left) and tripod floor lamps ($180, far right), but vintage finds will give you the edge. Find similar at The Junk Shop in Greenwich or Crystal Palace Antiques and Modern.

I'm so excited about the upcoming Modern Show at Dulwich College (18 March, 10-4pm, $7, see modernshows.com). It is such a treat for fans of vintage and retro with the clean lines of Midcentury Modern as the focus. Perfect for the industrial look! }
