

Yeray Darias Camacho

ydarias@gmail.com
<http://developerscookbook.blogspot.com>
<https://github.com/ydarias>
<http://es.linkedin.com/in/ydarias>

Atlassian

173-185 Sussex Street
Sydney, NSW, 2000, Australia

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing in connection with your Java developer position. I found out about this offer in the Spring I/O 2012 where your Spanish ambassador announced it and I obtained further information through your website and bonillaware.com.

In 2006 I got a B.Sc. in Computer Science from the University of La Laguna, Spain. After that I have been attending professional events like QCon London, Spring I/O and various BarCamps and Open Spaces about different topics. I also read related blogs and specialized literature to improve my skills. All the knowledge I have gained over the years is shared by writing my technical blog, by speaking at events and by collaborating in colleagues' publications, revising the contents.

My first post was as programmer in a medium size company, but it was not until I joined my present team that I started to develop software with full autonomy, learning to adapt quickly to shifting priorities, and doing the work needed to get things done. I am used to working in a collaborative environment where all members of the team can participate and help to build our applications.

Although I might not have as many years of work experience as other candidates I truly believe I would prove to be a very capable, rewarding and useful candidate for this post. I am fully motivated, hard-working and most willing to learn. I am a person who don't throw in the towel easily and face new challenges doing my best.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Yours faithfully,

Yeray Darias Camacho